Johnson Says Longer Truce Being Explored

Snub Leads to Filing

Hugh T. McCollum, office manager of Fusz - Schmelzle & Co. Inc. and commander of the civil air patrol squadron, filed for election to the city council Wednesday afternoon.

McCollum said today that he filed because he had not received a preliminary prospectus concerning the sale of $1,200,000 in water and sewer bonds. He said he had asked the mayor and city manager that he be notified of the sale.

McCollum said he received a letter today from Manuel Drumm, city attorney, apologizing for not listing the company McCollum represents on the mailing list for bidders on the bonds.

More than 60 banks and bonding companies in St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, New York and Memphis were notified, Drumm said.

Drumm said that he took full responsibility for the "oversight."

McCollum said he accepted the apology but has no intention of withdrawing from the council race.

"I may withdraw later, if a man files," he said. "I just don't know right now."

McCollum filed for the post now occupied by Arthur Ziegenhorn, whose term expires April 4. Ziegenhorn has refiled.

Students Carry Protests to Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. AP -- University of California students are carrying to Gov. Ronald Reagan today their protests against his proposals that tuition be charged and budgets cut for higher education.

Saying the protest would be dignified, students from Santa Barbara, UCLA and other Southern California campuses are joining others from the campuses at Berkeley and Davis and Sacramento State College for a march to the Capitol from a park about six blocks away.

A student representative estimated the number of marchers between 2,000 and 3,000 with all nine UC campuses represented.

The leader of the group is Jay Jeffcoat, president of the Associated Students of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Students also are visiting offices of senators and assemblymen, the spokesman said.

The vehicle failed to make a turn, left the road and struck an embankment.

The driver received cuts on his face and leg and a passenger, Billy Mays, 15, Matthews, received a broken nose.

Both were treated at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Message to Pope Leaves Door Open

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has messaged Pope Paul VI that the United States is participating in "intensive efforts" to extend the current cease- fire in Vietnam into a prolonged truce for peace negotiations.

But administration officials said privately that despite a possible brief extension of the cease - fire they are skeptical of a breakthrough toward a peace settlement at this time.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is due to sum up the peace probe maneuvers in a 4 p.m. EST news conference today. The White House called special attention to Rusk's conference by announcing it late Wednesday at the same time it released Johnson's answer to the Pope's latest peace appeal.

In the message Johnson kept open the possibility of a Vietnamese truce extension but virtually ruled out again any longterm halt in the bombing of North Vietnam not compensated by a scaling - down of North Vietnam's military action.

The lunar new year truce in Vietnam is now in its second day. The United States and South Vietnam announced weeks ago they would stop fighting for four days.

Subsequently the Communists called for a seven-day cease-fire and the allies responded with a proposal for talks about the conditions of a prolonged suspension of hostilities. The bombing of North Vietnam is suspended during the truce now in effect.

Since the truce began shooting incidents have been reported in the South. In the North, U. S. aircraft continued to fly reconnaissance missions and one plane was shot down Wednesday.

The State Department and Department of Defense declined to treat the plane loss a major incident of truce violation. Defense officials indicated that North Vietnamese action against reconnaissance flights was to be expected.

Two possibilities for a truce extension appear to be open. One is that the United States and South Vietnam could extend it for the additional three days proposed by the Communist side even without agreeing on terms and conditions with enemy representatives.

The second possibility is that some arrangement still might be made with the Communists on conditions for a much long-

Hahn Appeals Contest

The attorney for Harold Hahn in the contest of election of Aubrey Michael as county collector today filed an appeal with the circuit clerk's office in Benton to have the case heard by the Missouri Supreme Court.

The appeal is based on the grounds that the judge -- in ruling to dismiss the notice of contest of election -- did not follow the law.

Hahn's attorney said today, "Our sole position in the appeal is that the order issued by the judge was contrary to the law."

He said the case will be heard by the State Supreme Court either in the present session of the court, which ends in June, or will be in the next session, which opens in October.

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig ruled in favor of Aubrey Michael in the contest of election filed for the office of Scott county collector of revenue by Harold Hahn Feb. 2.

Hahn came within 345 votes of winning the Nov. 8 election as a write - in candidate for the office of collector, according to the official count.

Hahn's attorney filed the first notice of election contest with Circuit Clerk Lynn Ingram on Nov. 17. A second amended notice containing allegations of voting fraud at 17 Scott county precincts was filed Dec. 22.

A hearing on the motions involved in the contest was held Jan. 26 in circuit court at Benton. Following the hearing, the judge took under advisement three motions including the motion to dismiss the second amended notice filed by Hahn.

Judge Craig listed eight reasons for his ruling to dismiss. Among the reasons, the judge said the notice of election contest failed to state sufficient grounds to warrant a recount.

New Redistrict Plan Presented in House

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A new congressional redistricting bill—the closest yet to the Supreme Court's one man-one vote rule — hit the Missouri House today.

It was sponsored by Rep. J. Anthony Dill, R-Affton. Under his plan districts would vary from the population norm of 431,981 by only slightly more than one per cent for the largest district, the 1st in St. Louis, to slightly under one per cent for the smallest, the 9th of northeastern Missouri.

A bill by Sen. Omar H. Avery D-Troy, with a population variance of about 6 per cent, is scheduled for its first hearing next Monday.

In the Senate, Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, returned on crutches after a near fatal automobile accident Nov. 22. He got out of the hospital only Wednesday, but promptly made his voice heard in opposition to a bill to provide state aid for kindergartens.

He said he was not against kindergartens but charged the bill was just "another effort by the omnivorous teachers' lobby to ram through another pay raise.

"This is just a plain, old-fashioned, garden variety pay raise."

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, offered an amendment to limit the increased $5,162,000 under the school foundation program strictly for kindergarten use.

The Senate was still debating this proposal at noon and the bill had to be laid over when the Senate quit work until Monday.

The House received a bill to guarantee a minimum hourly wage of $1.25 except for farm workers, domestic help, executive and administrative positions, government employes, salesmen, educational and charitable workers and anyone under 18 years old.

It also tackled a bill to require payment of prevailing wages on all public works but opposition arose and the bill had to be laid over.

The Senate received a bill to allow dissemination of information about contraception and birth control. It was offered by Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Clayton.

One of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' major recommendations—to create a toll turnpike authority—won Senate committee approval Wednesday.

Fire Burns Hay At M& M Grain

An unprotected electrical wire set fire to a stack of hay outside the M & M Grain Co., Highway 60 East in Miner, Wednesday afternoon. No damage to the building was caused.

Sikeston firemen were called at 2:11 p.m. and returned to the station at 2:35 p.m.

Snow Collapses Roof During Church Service

BALTIMORE, Md. AP -- The roof of a Roman Catholic church sagged under heavy snow and collapsed with a roar during Mass early today, injuring more than a score of persons.

The first department said 20 to 30 victims had been taken to hospitals from the St. Rose of Lima church.

There were an estimated 100 children and 20 adults in the church in the Brooklyn Park area of south Baltimore when the roof collapsed, firemen said. All were removed from the building.

One of the children, George Feely Jr., 7, a third-grader at St. Rose School next door, escaped out the back of the church.

He said he was about seven pews from the altar and heard something that "sounded like a door shutting."

"I saw something come down," he said. "It was the ceiling."

The roof collapsed following a snowfall of about 11 inches earlier this week.

The roof fell into the portion of the building housing the chapel, buckling and collapsing in the middle. The front and rear of the building remained upright.

Hearnes Dedicates First 2 Regional Plan Commissions

WEST PLAINS (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes dedicated the first two Regional Planning Commissions in Missouri today, expressing the hope they could bridge the gap between social needs and technological advances.

He spoke first at West Plains, then flew to Poplar Bluff for a similar ceremony.

In a speech prepared for the West Plains meeting he said tremendous technological advances in the "soaring sixties" have placed a severe strain on the social structure.

"The conflicts and confusions we experience in our everyday relationships," he said, "are primarily occasioned by our inability to close the gap between learning and understanding, and the vast advances resulting from space-age research.

He told the South Central Ozark Regional Planning Commission its main concern will be to plan and develop a system of better roads, schools, parks, social and cultural activities.

But he warned that "planning is useless and can be a trial and tribulation to the people unless their personal welfare is considered as important in any final decisions."

The governor said "planning and people are the necessary common elements to achieve the desired result of a better tomorrow for this region."

Hearnes sounded a similar note in a ceremony two hours later at Poplar Bluff. He said both regions offer marvelous opportunities for development of human, natural and economic resources through sound planning.

He said the "society-technology gap" must be closed by sound local planning because it "even now raises a discordant note of alarm in our society and threatens to bring havoc and ruin" to social and economic progress.

"We cannot fail because we do not wish the federal government to fill the vacuum that we would create by our own inaction."

Jaycees to Search For Outstanding Teacher

The Junior Chamber of Commerce announced plans to select the outstanding young educator in Sikeston to spotlight achievement and dedication of professional educators between 21 and 35.

The contest was announced Wednesday afternoon at a meeting of the Sikeston Community Teachers Association in the high school cafetorium by James D. Sickal, chairman of the project.

"Our search is part of a nationwide Jaycee program," Sickal said.

The contest is open to both men and women teaching in grades 1 through 12.

Names for nomination may be submitted by anyone. Persons wishing to nominate a teacher are asked to send the name and school address to Sickal, Box 805, or call GR 1-1000.

A screening committee was selected by Glenn Jones, president of the teachers association, to help Sickal select final nominees. Persons named to the committee are: Harold Khiene, director of secondary education; Robert G. Miller, director of elementary education; Donald Fulton, principal of Lincoln school; Mrs. Annette French, Lee Hunter teacher; Mrs. James Beaird, junior high school teacher, and Mrs. Tony Statler, high school teacher.

Nominations will be judged by a panel of civic leaders. The winner will be honored at a special awards banquet and presented with a certificate and a $50 savings bond.

Winners from throughout the state will be eligible for a state competition, which will determine delegates to a national outstanding young educator program, Sickal said.

Violations of Lunar Truce Rated Minor

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) - The lunar new year truce eased through its second day today with neither side in the Vietnam war claiming a major violation. But U.S. and Vietnamese military authorities reported 114 incidents, and said 28 were considered significant.

Among the significant actions was a seven-hour fire fight between a company of the 173rd Airborne Brigade and an estimated 30 Viet Cong Wednesday in war Zone D north of Saigon. A U.S. spokesman said the American company of about 120 infantrymen suffered moderate casualties. Two Viet Cong were reported killed.

He said the Americans were moving to a new position and the guerrillas opened up from bunkers and trees. The Viet Cong used more than 100 hand grenades, rifle fire and a Claymore mine in the engagment, the spokesman said, while the Americans called in artillery and air strikes. The air attacks continued for four hours while the Americans removed their wounded, the spokesman reported.

The U.S. comapny was making a "positioning movement" and was not conducting an offensive operation, the spokesman said. He gave no further details.

With at least two more days to go in the cease-fire and all reports for the second day not yet in, the number of incidents was running slightly behind the total of 122 reported during the two-day truce at Christmas. But it was considerably below the 178 for the same cease-fire period over the New Year's weekend.

Vandals Paint Two Vehicles

Sikeston police received two reports Wednesday night from residents of Matthews street stating that vandals had thrown green paint on a car and a pickup truck.

The damaged car is owned by Carter Bell, 511 Matthews, and the pickup truck is owned by Dorma Angle, 414 Matthews, police said.

In other police activity, Dixie Stewart, route three, was charged by police Wednesday with careless and imprudent driving, police reported.

James Phillips Sr., 241 East Kathleen, was charged by police with allowing his dog to run unleashed.

Frank William, Poplar Bluff, was arrested by police Tuesday on East Malone and charged with intoxication, police said.

Precious Wade, Poplar Bluff, was arrested Tuesday on East Malone and charged with operating a vehicle with improper registration, exceeding the speed limit and driving without an operator's license, police reported.

Three motorists were charged by police Tuesday with running a stop sign on North West street: Larry Parks, 310 Virginia; Donald C. Lewis, 101 Salcedo road, and Patricia E. Barnes, Morehouse.

Powell Rapped for Refusal to Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a select House committee looking into Adam Clayton Powell's qualifications to be seated said today they think the Harlem Democrat has hurt his chances by refusing to answer some of its questions.

Powell, acting on the advice of his lawyers, cited constitutional objections Wednesday as he refused to discuss his New York legal difficulties and charges he misused government travel funds.

There was widespread feeling, both within and outside of the committee, that he had made it difficult for Democrats who want to find some way to seat him.

Some felt that his legal objections, essentially that the select committee should confine itself to the constitutional requirements of age, citizenship and inhabitancy in considering his qualifications, were intended mainly for use in a later court challenge to any unseating move.

"I think he made a mistake in not taking the opportunity to explain the allegations against him," said Rep. Charles M. Teague, R-Calif.

And a Democratic member, Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida, said "I regret that Mr. Powell didn't make a full response to all the questions. It would have afforded him a good opportunity to comment on some of the impressions people have gotten about his activities."

Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., asked about the probable effect of Powell's performance, said, "You will have to be the judge of that. But it certainly didn't help him."

Celler said the committee planned to call additional witnesses before it reports back to the House Feb. 23. The House set this deadline Jan. 10 when it voted 364 to 64 to have Powell stand aside until a select committee could determine his qualifications.

In rejecting Powell's contention that the probe should be confined to whether he possesses the constitutional requirements of being 25, a citizen for seven years and an inhabitant of the state which chooses him, Celler said the House gave the committee a "very broad" mandate.

"Without benefit of your testimony," Celler told him, "the committee will have to draw upon other sources." He said it "has no alternative but to draw whatever inferences may flow from whatever public record has been made."

These presumably would include the findings of a House administration subcommittee that Powell used official funds for private travel and had his wife on the payroll even though she lives in Puerto Rico. Also included could be four arrest orders for contempt of court now outstanding in New York as a result of a long unpaid court judgment.

Powell asked permission to make a statement to the committee, but Celler said Powell had lost his right to speak by refusing to answer questions.

"They broke their agreement," Powell told newsmen outside the hearing room. Then he delivered portions of his statement before television cameras, telling "my dear colleagues" that "Adam Clayton Powell is not on trial today, but the United States Constitution is."

Powell did not disclose his plans, but a New York lawyer who handles his business affairs, Seymour Barash, told reporters he is planning a nationwide speaking tour for Powell this spring.

The Harlem Democrat will be accompanied by a singing group from Bimini, the Bahamas, Barash said, adding that the purpose of the trip will be to pay off the rest of the New York court judgment and heavy legal fees in connection with it.

Rising Gas Prices Defy Usual Winter Pattern

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline price increases by major oil companies are spreading across the country.

The boosts of one cent a gallon at service stations are unseasonal and came in the wake of rising demand and higher labor costs.

Gulf Oil Co. Wednesday became the latest company to join the price rise parade. The advance affects all of the company's outlets except in the West Coast area.

Earlier, American Oil Co., Continental Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co., and Sunray Dx Oil Co. announced price boosts.

Gulf gave no reason for the increase, but a Gulf contract agreement last month set a general pattern for numerous new settlements between oil refiners and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union.

The general pattern included a 14-cent hourly pay hike immediately and a 4 per cent increase next January.

The wage levels were not immediately available.

Gasoline prices at this time of year normally go down instead of up. Wintry weather cuts driving and this leads to a buildup of inventories of motor fuel.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that gasoline stocks now are about 10 million barrels above inventories one year ago. But demand has been climbing. An industry source put consumption of gasoline at more than 4.6 million barrels daily, more than 4.5 per cent above a year ago.

The institute said service station prices for regular grade gasoline averaged 32½ cents a gallon last December.

Bureau of Public Roads figures show that there were 91.7 million motor vehicles registered in the United States at the end of 1965. Total motor vehicle fuel consumption for that year was 71.1 billion gallons, an average of 775 gallons per vehicle.

Of these vehicles, 76.6 million were passenger cars, which consumed 49.7 billion gallons of motor fuel, an average of 649 gallons per car.

Four Bridges To Improve Drainage

MEMPHIS -- Paul Montgomery, Inc., Poplar Bluff, was today awarded a $149,875 contract for constructing four county bridges across ditch 251 in New Madrid County, Mo.

In announcing the contract award, Col. James A. Vivian, Memphis district engineer, said that the bridge construction is in connection with the enlargement of the ditch to improve Little River drainage under the St. Francis Basin project.

The four bridges will be located between Lone Star and the junction of ditch 251 with Otter slough, north of Lilbourn.

Work will commence in 30 days and be completed in 12 months, Colonel Vivian said.

Restaurant Fire Cause Remains Undetermined

MONTGOMERY, ALA. (AP) - Fire Department officials continued their search today for the cause of a flash fire which swept through a plush penthouse restaurant Tuesday night claiming 25 lives.

Funeral services for some of the victims were held today with others scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Fire Chief W. T. Mallory said his men were still interviewing witnesses in an effort to determine the cause of the blaze at Dale's Penthouse.

Victims of the worst fire in Montgomery's history included a former member of the State Public Service Commission, Ed Pepper, and a top official of the International Teamsters Union, Sidney Zagri of Washington.

The wife of the Montgomery Advertiser's sports editor, Jack Doane, died in the flames which swept the restaurant where she was a hostess.

Employes of the fashionable dining spot, and diners who were able to escape, said the fire started in a cloakroom and spread out of control before it could be extinguished.

There was no immediate explanation for the speed with which the flames enveloped the penthouse.

Some diners and employes escaped before the elevators failed and others managed to reach the roof through windows. Firemen led them to safety after the flames were controlled.

The restaurant is located atop the 10-story Walter Bragg Smith apartment hotel in downtown Montgomery.

John English, a part owner of the restaurant, estimated the damage at about $135,000.

Taylor Rates Peace Conditions Improved

LAS CRUCES, N. M. AP -- Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former U. S. ambassador to South Vietnam, says conditions for a negotiated peace in Vietnam have become more favorable.

But Taylor told an audience Wednesday night at New Mexico State University that "as far as he knew," there had been no tangible evidence of progress toward negotiations. He said that if North Vietnam should put out a peace feeler, it would be done so quietly and carefully that "you and I won't know anything about it."

Speaking before 1,500 persons, Taylor said that Hanoi, Peking and Moscow have started a propaganda campaign "to convince the U. S. that a halt to bombing of North Vietnam is the only chance for peace."

Taylor speaks tonight at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, where a group of students began a "peace vigil" Wednesday night. About 30 students were in the university's concert hall, where Taylor was to speak, reading, playing a phonograph and fasting.

They said they would stay until after Taylor's speech.

Dexter Soldier Killed

DEXTER AP - The parents of a Dexter soldier said today they had been notified by the Defense Department that their son had been killed in action in South Vietnam.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sisler said they had a telegram that their son, Lt. Kenneth Sisler, 29, was killed Jan. 7 by small arms fire near Da Nang.

Sisler also is survived by his wife, Jane, and two small children, all of Dexter.

Quake Hits Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - A severe earthquake hit Colombia today and first accounts indicated at least 25 were dead and many injured.

The quake was felt throughout the nation, and especially in the cities of Bogota, Calif., Pereira, Medellin, Bucaramanga and Cucuta. Neighboring Venezuela also was shaken.

Panic was widespread in Colombia. Phones and other communications failed in many areas.

The quake was recorded at 10:27 a.m. EST, in both Colombia and Venezuela.

International communications out of Bogota were cut off for more than an hour after the quake hit.

Thousands fled into the streets of Bogota, the capital.

The quake in Venezuela was lighter, judging from first reports.

In Washington, scientists of the Coast and Geodetic Survey's national earthquake information center said the quake's magnitude was between 6 3/4 and 7. This would mean it was "potentially damaging" to any buildings in the immediate area, they said.

Thompson Gets Change Of Venue

BENTON -- Tommy Lee Thompson, 18, Sikeston, charged with burglary and stealing, was granted a change of venue to Stoddard county today in circuit court at Benton.

The attorney for Thompson had filed for a change of venue both from the judge and from the people.

Thompson is charged in connection with the Feb. 17, 1965, burglary of the Daris Burgess residence, 842 Ruth in Sikeston.

Thompson was acquitted of a first degree murder charge Dec. 9, 1966, in circuit court at Jackson in connection with the Feb. 1, 1965, slaying of Mrs. W. R. Lewis, Sikeston.

Death Toll May Reach 100 in Tasmanian Fire

HOBART, Tasmania (AP) - The death toll in Tasmania's disastrous bush and forest fires could reach at least 100, a senior police officer said today as flames roared out of the bush again to threaten more towns.

Police, firemen and 50 prisoners released from Hobart's jail were rushed to the orchard country at Huonville, 20 miles south of the island state's capital, where a northwest wind was pushing the fire toward houses.

Fifty more prisoners were trucked to the Bagdad area, 30 miles north of Hobart, where another blaze threatened to break from the bushland.

The confirmed toll so far was 49 dead, hundreds hurt and 3,500 homeless. The senior police officer said it might take a week to get an accurate count of the dead.

Eight towns were reported wiped out. Among 700 buildings destroyed were 650 houses. The others included hotels, schools, offices and factories.

Tens of thousands of apples, the Huon Valley's main crop, were ruined in the more than 10,000 acres burned over. The Derwent Valley, Tasmania's hop-growing center, had 500 persons without food or shelter.

Hundreds of head of livestock were killed. Thousands of workers and children were idle because factories and schools were razed. Smoke rose 10,000 feet over Hobart.

Workers struggled through the night to restore power, water and communications to outlying townships.

Hearnes Calls for New Government Concept

POPLAR BLUFF (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes called today for a "new philosophy of limited government close to the people to guarantee the future of our democratic system."

Hearnes, a Democrat from Southeastern Missouri, has been a frequent critic of Johnson Administration policies and the growth of centralized government.

In a speech prepared for a joint service club luncheon, he renewed his appeal for "block grants" - a return of some federal revenue to the states.

If Congress does not approve such a proposal, he suggested that the states resort to the initiative method of calling a Constitutional Convention to propose a constitutional amendment authorizing Congress to return a part of the federal income tax to the states.

He said the people "can accept the central government theory as being the panacea of all our community ills" or "we here in Missouri-who believe in the theory of limited government close to and the servant of the people-can lead the nation in achieving the coveted goal."

States must re-examine their role, he said, in developing strong and stable local government.

"Legislation is necessary to strengthen the powers of local government and to encourage cooperative approaches to common problems. The regional concept-for instance-is an excellent vehicle for common problem solving and a worthy substitute for our present proliferation of government units."

The governor earlier today dedicated Missouri's first two Regional Planning Commissions at West Plains in the south central Ozarks and at Poplar Bluff

He urged the civic club members to recruit others to the cause of limited government close to the people."

"There are problems of financing government in a way that is fair and equitable to all without stifling growth of our economic system," he said.

"There are social problems connected with the aged, the youth and the poor. There are problems of providing a better education for more and more people. There are the moral problems of maintaining a society with a proper sense of values.

"There is the paramount problem . . . to review and redefine the role of government at the federal, state and local level."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:

TIPS ON HOW TO KNOCK YOUR TOWN

While scanning through the various newspapers the Standard exchanges with, one of the Minnesota papers had an editorial explaining how to be a successful knocker of your own community. Of course, none of our area citizens would fall into this category but you might be interested in the problems other communities face.

Here it is:

TEN WAYS TO RUIN YOUR TOWN

1. Attend no meeting of any kind. Criticize the way "they" are doing things.

2. Remind others at all times of the cold winters and hot summers - and the ruggedness required for those who live here.

3. Complain about the police department, fire department, Chamber of Commerce, and all other governmental and civic groups.

4. Keep convincing yourself that your attention at school programs, service clubs, concerts, ball games, exhibits and benefit programs is not important - you'll never be missed.

5. Knock your city council or county commissioners - and be sure you never attend while they are in session.

6. Stay away from church. You might attend on Easter or during the Christmas season just to reassure yourself that all who attend are hypocrites.

7. Purchase most of your requirements through "discount" catalogs. These firms are the first to come forth with donations and service to your community.

8. Remind others that your local newspaper is no good - it misses more local news than the out-of-town papers get by accident.

9. Remember that all kids are delinquents. All businessmen are crooks, and that uncomplimentary remarks about the town are the order of the day.

10. Above all, always be skeptical, cynical and negative about anything that is designed for the community's progress and betterment. Your motto should be: "If it's good, it can't happen here."

* * *

For example, what can you do.....if, after thinking it over carefully, you pay more than $300 for a registered basset hound puppy - who then grows up and looks happy?

POSTAL PROBLEMS

The first general postage rate increase since 1962 appears almost certain to be approved by Congress this year. As outlined by President Johnson in his State of the Union message, the proposed increase would produce around $700 million a year in additional revenue in fiscal 1968. Yet even that sum would not eliminate the Post Office deficit, which will reach $1.2 billion in the current fiscal year.

The problems of the Post Office are familiar ones: Sharply rising costs, slowly rising revenue, mounting mail volume, and sometimes erratic service. Each of these problems is greater today than ever before. Mail volume, for example, originally was estimated at 77.7 billion pieces for fiscal 1967. But it probably will climb to 80 billion pieces.

Although the flood of mail sets records every year, the Post Office Department has been slow to adopt new methods of coping with it. The powerful postal unions look with suspicion on efforts to introduce mail-handling machinery. Most of the country's post offices suffer from such handicaps as inadequate space, poor location, or inexperienced personnel. In these circumstances, postal officials assert, it is a wonder that mail delivery is as good as it is.

Public attitudes toward postal service and postal finances are often confused by the fact that, unlike most government agencies, the Post Office is both a public service and a big business operation. Perhaps no single institution renders direct personal service to more individuals. On this basis, it can be argued that so nearly universal a service should be financed, at least in part, from general tax revenues.

On the other hand, the volume of revenue received by the Post Office in direct payment for services rendered (about $4.6 billion in 1966) places it in the class of big business. The postal service now employs about 700,000 persons, or about the number employed by General Motors. Contracts of the Post Office with railroads, airlines, steamship and truck companies involve outlays that will total $605 million in the current fiscal year.

For most of its history, the U.S. Post Office has been operated as a public service. Postal expenditure exceeded postal revenue by $40 in the very first year of the Republic, 1789. From 1790 to 1837, the Post Office recorded small surpluses in every year except one. A decade of deficits followed, relieved only briefly by four surplus years beginning in 1848. During the past 116 years, there has been a deficit in all except 13 years. Most of the surpluses have been shown in time of war, when there always has been a great increase in the amount of revenue-producing first class mail handled by the Post Office.

Multiplication of Post Office activities over the years has had a direct bearing on postal deficits. Of all the special services added during the last century, only the postal savings system - no longer in existence - operated without a loss. The deficits have been enlarged by various services provided without charge, or at less than cost, as a matter of public policy.

Among the various classes of mail, first class and air mail, which together account for almost 60 per cent of all mail by volume, earn a small profit for the Post Office. Third class mail, which includes advertising circulars or "junk mail," pays for only 60 per cent of costs. Second class mail - mostly magazines - pays for only 30 per cent.

The proposed postage rate increase would not change matters. President Johnson wants to raise the first class rate from 5¢ to 6¢ an ounce, and the air mail rate from 8¢ to 9¢ an ounce. Increases sought for second and third class mail may amount to 20 to 30 per cent - hardly enough to make those categories self-supporting.

The Post Office is in the difficult position of attempting to provide efficient service with antiquated plant and equipment and a lack of operating flexibility. Although some modifications have been made, the country's present network of post offices is essentially the same as that of a quarter-century ago. In the meantime, transportation patterns have changed and population has been growing and shifting.

Altogether, the Post Office has found it harder than ever before to live up to the famous slogan on the facade of its New York City headquarters: "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

REDUCING THE RISK OF HEART ATTACK

If the fabled Aladdin could appear with his magic lamp, offering to substantially improve your chances to avoid or delay a heart attack, he would get a lot of local business. And if his magic lamp really proved effective, he would surely be hailed as one of the greatest benefactors of all time.

Fortunately, Aladdin's services are not needed. What's needed is for you and your family to follow these six simple rules listed by your Heart Association:

1. Control high blood pressure. New drugs and treatment can lessen the risks of heart attack and stroke.

2. Don't smoke cigarettes. They increase the risk of heart attack. Help your family avoid the habit.

3. Watch your diet. Eat foods lower in saturated fat and cholesterol. Help your children form good diet habits.

4. Keep weight normal. Extra pounds increase the risk of high blood pressure and heart attack.

5. Keep physically fit. Regular exercise improves circulation and strengthens the heart.

6. See your doctors regularly. Let him advise what's best for every member of your family.

Your Heart Association emphasizes that no guarantees can be offered. But it also points out that almost any individual, through adherence to the six rules, can surely improve his chances for a longer and happier life.

We would like to add a seventh suggestion: Support the 1967 Heart Fund Campaign, being conducted here throughout February. Give - So More Will Live!

THE NEED FOR RESTRAINT

The government's "noninflationary" guideline for wage increases has been set at 3.2 per cent a year.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little ordeals is having to cope with overly neat people.

You know the kind I mean:

If you give them a pigeon, they already have a pigeonhole waiting to put it into.

If you invite them into your home, the first thing they do is surreptitiously wipe their fingers on your cocktail table to see if your wife has dusted it lately.

If the first robin of spring alights outside their window, they shoo it away for fear it will ruin the perfection of their lawn by digging for worms.

Life for the overly neat person is a package deal, neatly wrapped and tied. His motto is, "A place for everything, and everything in its place."

This philosophy has a nice, high sounding ring to it - but the ring is hollow. If there is a place for everything, and everything is in its place, you've got a static universe and a dead world. It is a perfect description of a cemetery.

The trouble with neat people is that they aren't satisfied with merely having all their own things in their proper places. They feel a divine mission to come over to your place and put everything there in its right place. They demand that you be like them.

And there is only one defense possible for an untidy person when one of these unctuous reformers tries to mold your life into his own pallid, polished pattern. Look him squarely in the eye — and then spit in it.

The trouble with the overly neat person is that, basically, he was born into the wrong world. He hates surprise and change. He would like always to be carrying an umbrella when it rains and be wearing overshoes when it snows. Year-round, if he had his way, the sun would come up at the same time every morning and set at the same time every evening.

Unfortunately, the world isn't like that. The world is a lovely wilderness of welter and wonder, full of blind alleys and tremendous vistas, of flowers and thorns and bears and butterflies, of wasps and hidden honey, of poisonous plants and helpful herbs, of stinging thistles and ripening fruit.

Nature isn't at all overly neat. In nature everything - even the rocks that crack in winter —is in movement, trying to go from one place to another. Even the celestial spheres vary in their orbits. They hate too much order, too.

As a chronically untidy man myself, I hope that heaven for me will turn out to be as disorderly as the desk I keep. I hope it will turn out to be a junkpile a million miles wide and ten thousand miles high, where I can spend eternity cheerfully pawing through the debris in search of souvenirs.

That, of course, would be a hell to the overly tidy person. He aspires to a heaven that, like his life, is as planned as a cellblock.

Life does need some planning. But a life too planned can become an unplanned death.

Just how accurate such a guideline can be is a matter of conjecture. But most economists think that the existing one is far better than nothing. And most of them are concerned by the fact that numbers of recent wage settlements have exceeded the 3.2 per cent level.

And that, it seems, may only be the start. National labor leaders have said that they have no intention of following the guideline. Whatever one may think of their arguments, this policy, if successful, cannot help but be strongly inflationary. And if a major wave of inflation really takes hold, all of us will be in for deep trouble.

For example, a spokesman for the Associated General Contractors has said that government controls are likely unless the Building Trades Unions lower their wage sights. This would mean more bureaucratic domination, by fiat, of the affairs of both labor and management. And both would be the losers.

What is urgently, even desperately, needed now, is restraint -- restraint on the part of business and labor and, of peak importance, the big spenders in the government.

The teenagers thought about that for several moments, then a cool cat standing on the curb announced, "I get it, man -0 rhythm and blues!"

An elderly bull's days of love-making were, alas, behind him, but the tender-hearted farmer let him remain in the pasture with the cows he could no longer service. But the farmer, having a head for business, bought a young bull and turned him loose in the pasture. Noting his young rival, the old timer began to snort and paw the turf.

"Stop working yourself up," the farmer told him. "You're too old for that kind of stuff."

"Maybe I am," answered the bull, "but at least I can show him I'm not a cow, can't I?"

UNHANDY ANDY

Reading James Thurber's sketch about his father in The Thurber Album hits a responsive cord with me. All my life I have been an unhandy Andy. I admire those who are clever in doing things with their hands, but this is not for me. As a boy I flunked a course in manual training and I haven't improved since.

I know what the senior Thurber was up against. I belong to his club. James Thurber says this of his father: "He was plagued by the mechanical . . . Knobs froze at his touch, doors stuck, lines fouled, the detachable would not detach, the adjustable would not adjust. He could rarely get the top off anything, and he was forever trying to unlock something with the key to something else.

In 1908, trying to fix the snap lock to the door of his sons' rabbit pen, he succeeded only after getting inside the cage, where he was imprisoned for three hours with six Belgian hares and thirteen guinea pigs."

AN UNLIMITED FUTURE

What does a major timber company produce?

Most people, asked that question, will come up with an obvious answer: Lumber.

But nowadays, so versatile is wood when transformed by the arts of chemistry, that it is only a part of the answer - and the smaller part.

One of this country's leading timber companies says that, while it is producing more lumber than ever, other products account for nearly 75 per cent of its business. The list of wood products literally numbers thousands, and it is constantly growing.

Silvichemicals is the name given to products which have their beginnings in such wood wastes as sawdust, bark and chips. It is reported that something like 2,600 of these chemicals have so far been separated from the wastes, and have an annual market value of $260 million. They range an astonishing gamut, and play a role in the production of innumerable products -- including such totally diverse commodities as food and fuel. And their role in the economic life of the nation, the researchers are convinced, is destined to vastly expand.

This means, obviously, a huge and ever - increasing demand for wood. That demand will be satisfied-- thanks to tree farming which sees to it that the new growth equals or exceeds the cut. More than 66 million acres in 48 of the 50 states are now managed by their owners as tree farms. Timber, in all its myriad manifestations, faces an unlimited future.

H.L. Hunt Says

A SOLID FRONT FOR FREEDOM

Our Republican form of government is under constant attack from the enemies of freedom. It is a form of government that stimulates individualism and independence among its citizens. These are two ingredients our enemies cannot tolerate; but they are also sources of weakness to those of us who prize them most.

Enemies of freedom regiment readily Individualists are not apt to coordinate and are prone not to cooperate. If freedomists do not "hang together" they will most assuredly hang separately.

Those who love freedom can defend the Republic best by standing together, commending each other and presenting a solid front for freedom. They should patronize advertisers who demonstrate their own predisposition to freedom by utilizing the talents and services of newscasters, entertainers, writers, speakers and media that are slanted for, not against, liberty.

It is enlightening to list those that come to mind under each of these categories, and it is heartwarming to know how many notable people, periodicals and patriotic groups are actively pro-freedomist. Compile your own list of good examples, submitting it to others. Encourage them to do likewise. Encourage advertisers, by buying their products, telling others about them and commending them by letter.

Ingenious Communist propaganda admonishes businessmen to soothe the socialist and cooperate with the Communist or lose customers. It disdains patriots, charging "guilt by association." Freedomists must ignore this as nonsense and not fear being classified with others who are important, liberty-loving, Americans.

The menace of Communism is on the march. In 22 years they have extended the slavish tentacles of Communist rule over one billion people. Their prime objective, if we will believe them, is to wrap these tentacles around the USA. Ours must be to assure that they don't. To prevent it requires a joint effort. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

On January 29, Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson reported a unique situation at Huntsville, Ala., in which the Southern Iron and Equipment Company had offered to save the Pentagon $32,000 by turning back to the defense department for only $200 some junked tooling which the department was reordering elsewhere.

Immediately after publication of this column, the defense department telephoned Southern Iron and Equipment saying they would like to discuss the acquiring of the $32,000 worth of tooling which the company had previously offered for only the original junk price of $200.

WASHINGTON -- It's unusual that around 400 top business leaders can come to Washington for a conference with the President and the Secretary of State and not make headlines. But that's what happened last week.

Some of the most important business executives in the nation, from Los Angeles, New York, Chicago and San Francisco, arrived at the invitation of Secretary Rusk to discuss the Johnson proposal to promote trade with the European Communist nations. Ratification of the USA-USSR consular treaty is part of this over - all policy.

President Johnson greeted business leaders at a cocktail party reception in the Madison room on the top floor of the state department.

"My father told me never to make speeches at rodeos, country dances or cocktail parties," he said. "Despite that, I want to give you the philisophy behind my idea of improving relations between the United States and the Soviet Union."

The President then talked quite simply, but obviously from the heart, regarding his idea that if "the two big boys," as he expressed it, pull together there will be no more war. He emphasized the fact that only the United States and Russia have refined atomic weapons, and that the world has reached a point where these weapons could spread to irresponsible governments; so steps must be taken to stop this spread. He considered the treaty for the non - proliferation of nuclear weapons, now almost concluded, to be an important step in this direction.

CRACKING J. EDGAR HOOVER

He enumerated the steps he had taken to improve relations with the European Communist world, his hope to get Russian cooperation for peace in Vietnam, and in saving the expense of a cutthroat extravagant race to build anti-missile systems.

Indirectly he took a crack at his friend J. Edgar Hoover, whom he has continued as FBI Director three times beyond the statutory retirement age of 70, yet who has been undermining the President's Russian - American consular treaty.

Johnson scoffed at the idea that the treaty would permit more Soviet spies in the United States. The United States will get the same number of consulates in the USSR as Russia got in the USA, he said, and emphasized that American travelers would get better protection through these consulates.

"With 2,500 Soviets in this country," the President said, "I don't see who 25 or 30 more can be very dangerous."

Lady Bird was also at the reception and was introduced by Vice President Humphrey.

RUSK'S BRIEFING

Earlier, in the state department auditorium, Secretary Rusk briefed the business leaders off the record on the importance of promoting East-West trade.

There is nothing inconsistent, he said, about President Johnson's war against Communist forces in Vietnam and friendly overtures to Communist nations in Europe. The best way to end the Vietnam war, Rusk contended, was to improve relations with the Soviet bloc. Hanoi, he explained, is caught between Peking's militant anti - western policy and Moscow's peaceful coexistence policy. East - West trade, therefore, will demonstrate that Moscow is right, and perhaps persuade Hanoi to follow the same coexistence path.

The more Communist nations that can be attracted by trade to follow the coexistence line, Rusk argued, the more impressed North Vietnam will be.

Rusk said he wasn't concerned about building up a huge volume of trade; all he hopes to do is soften the rigid U.S. attitude against doing business behind the onetime Iron Curtain. Tariffs on Communist goods entering this country are two or three times higher than on non - Communist goods, and Rusk said removing these barriers would have a psychological effect on the Communist world and shorten the war.

Several other state department officials also briefed the business leaders about the importance of cooperation between the world's two giant nations. The only official who seemed slightly out of step was Dr. Eugene Rostow, former dean of the Yale Law School. He brought in the old theme about Communist aggression.

Note -- Last year, after Firestone Rubber had signed an agreement with Romania to build a tire plant there, it was scared off by the Young Americans for Freedom, a right-wing Republican organization, which had been working with a Firestone competitor, Goodyear. Last month, the Young Americans for Freedom announced jubilantly that they had scared American Motors away from its plan to sell Ramblers in Russia.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Walter Reuther Maneuvering Into Position To Launch Drive For "Union of the Poor"

Washington, D.C. -- Rusty-haired Walter Reuther, who has just unleashed his own cultural revolution inside labor, now is playing for big stakes -- a third militant, surging union federation built around his massive Auto Workers organization and a Hoffa-less, equally gargantuan teamsters brotherhood.

That's the consensus in labor's high command which he has been needing for months with rapier-like charges of hardening of their organizational arteries.

Thus, with a new force of some 3.2 million strategically placed followers, Reuther, the incomparable of the 1930s, leader of sitdowns, dynamo of the old CIO, would be free to unleash the mass movement of which he and his younger brother, Victor, have always dreamed.

Unfettered from strong ties with the venerable AFL-CIO, freed from disciplinary necessities of following the leadership of the 72-year-old veteran labor chief George Meany, and finally in a position to ignore directives and policies of the old giant AFL-CIO itself, Walter Reuther will begin a long planned drive for the unionization of millions of poor.

WIDER GOALS -- He will parallel this with new thrusts into the fields of white collar and professional employes such as teachers, nurses and employes of the federal government, where his goal in Washington, D.C., alone is 800,000 members.

Of course this would mean that he has to pull out of the 13.5 million member AFL-CIO. He could slip out of the huge labor network as easily as Houdini did out of a straitjacket. This could be done with a short, simple resolution at the United Auto Workers convention which its executive board has scheduled for April 20. They could just vote to disaffiliate.

Then, the Reuthers, with Jimmy Hoffa hitting the last mile to the Atlanta Penitentiary, could make their pitch for some sort of fraternal arrangement with the neighboring International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Both unions have their national headquarters in Detroit.

There has always been an off-the-record liaison with UAW and the teamsters. There need not necessarily be any form of affiliation at first. This could come later as Hoffa's influence diminishes.

But, the two giant unions would work closely all over the United States.

Such a coalition would make it quite easy for Reuther and his special aides inside the AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department -- an organization of some six million members with a treasury of $3 million -- to move into thousands of "communities of the poor."

Already one of Reuther's veteran organizers, Brendon Sexton, is directing a network stretching from Sleepy Hollows in Kentucky to the congested, teeming ghetto districts such as Watts, West Chicago, and Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant in New York City.

NEED NOT WAIT -- Reuther estimates that there are some 35 million working poor and they could be organized into some 10,000 units in loosely formed quasi-unions. Except for the fact that the workers' alliance of the 1930s was composed of unemployed, Reuther's contemplated network of the 1960s would parallel the alliance and people it with those he calls "the working poor." It could become a mighty force.

All this need not wait until he formally pulls out of the AFL-CIO -- if he ever does, which is by no means certain despite his resignation from the vice presidency. He simply could push ahead with his own organizational objectives, despite the fact that he has resigned as chairman of the AFL-CIO's standing committee on organization and economic policy.

Meanwhile he will continue to marshall a war of nerves against the AFL-CIO hierarchy which he claims, in his kindest moments, has become archaic and stuck in the plush of its own special society.

For the moment he is expected to find mighty little support inside the AFL-CIO. However there are a few leaders who might go along with him. But no one of consequence. Which is why he is expected to turn to that other giant, the Teamsters.

Together they could give the elders of today's labor movement a long run for their money and membership.

Lancers Trio To Sing Friday

The Lancers, an evangelistic gospel trio from Charlotte, N.C., will sing at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the First General Baptist church.

Singing the lead part is Tremble. Bain plays the piano and sings baritone.

The public is invited.

Plans for a new high-rise apartment by a San Diego architect, C.J. Paderwski, are, to say the least, revolutionary. The building will revolve eight times a day, guaranteeing each tenant equal opportunity for a view of the Pacific Ocean. Will Parry.

Maris Expected To Sign Card Contract Today

ST. LOUIS A) - With home run king Roger Maris apparently in the fold, St. Louis Cardinal General Manager Stan Musial can turn his attention to a few more unsigned players and the troublesome grass in Busch Memorial Stadium.

Maris, recently traded to the Cardinals from the New York Yankees, was to meet today with Musial at Busch Stadium. He was expected to sign a contract for the coming season for $75,000, about what he was paid with New York.

Maris hit 61 home runs in 1961, a record for the 162-game season adopted with league expansion.

One of the apparent Cardinal holdouts is catcher Tim McCarver.

McCarver and Musial met Wednesday. Later, McCarver said, "we're not close."

McCarver is believed seeking a contract for $30,000 to $35,000. He led the league in triples last year with 13 and caught 148 games. Only the Chicago Cubs' Randy Hundley appeared in more games in a catching role.

Even if Musial signs all his players the team may not make the home opener April 11.

Pickets appeared Wednesday at the stadium and slowed sodding work on the playing field.

The first sodding job at the stadium, which opened only last summer, didn't pan out. Experts said too much clay in the soil prevented proper drainage.

The dispute over the grass stems from one union's position that the re-sodding is new work and should not be handled by stadium maintenance personnel.

Stadium officials decided to replace the grass with sod from the farm of Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller. The new sod is said to be more porous than the original stadium soil.

Maker For Tigers

COLUMBIA, MO., -- Returning to Brewer field house for its first home game in two months, Missouri's freshman basketball team tangles with Kansas State here on Tuesday, prior to the Tiger-Wildcat varsity game.

Going into last Thursday's road meeting with Kansas, Coach Bob Price's squad stood at 2-2 with early-season home-court wins over Quincy College's junior varsity and St. Louis, and defeats at St. Louis and Nebraska.

Former Howardville Cage Star Now Star With Army

EDITOR'S NOTE -- The following is from the Fort Leonard Wood Guidon. Many area basketball fans remember the back court ace of Howardville High -- Linnie McFerren. . . .

Behind the combined 53-point effort of backcourt tandem Lennie McFerren and Joe Lott, Echo 1-3 won the Company-level Post Basketball Championship on Jan. 19 with an 80-72 trimming of E-4-2.

It was the second straight title for a representative from the 3d Brigade.

Most of the credit, at least statistically, belonged to McFerren, a 5-foot-10 speedster from Howardsville, Mo., and Lott, his 6-2 runningmate former All-State Missouri prep cager.

McFerren tallied 28 points in all on 13 baskets and a pair of free throws while Lott contributed 25 on 11 field goals and three charity throws.

Individually, however, it was the loser's Terry Morgan, a 6-4 jumping-jack who blinked the scoreboard 37 times, taking high point honors. Morgan, a former Anderson High School and Anderson College, a Indiana product, was just about all that kept the title game from turning into a rout in the second half. In that period he hit 15 of 20 shots from the field that almost overcame an 11-point deficit - 38-27 - that the victors had built up by the intermission.

Winning Coach Robert Hallett called the "turning point when Lott hit two free throws with about two minutes left in the game. They had closed to two points at that time and were rallying but Lott's throws snuffed it and helped pull us away to the final margin."

Echo-1-3 had held a slim 17-15 edge at the end of the first period but four baskets by McFerren, and a pair each from Lott and team captain Richard Schlegelmilch highlighted a 21-point second period that gave the winners their comfortable half time lead.

"It was the toughest game-both offensively and defensively - we played in the entire tournament," Schlegelmilch said. "Their big man (Morgan) really put on a show. We held him down in the first half but got into foul trouble by doing it so we had to lay off a little near the end."

McFerren was named to the class M all-state honorable mention list last season, and had planned to attend college, but was drafted by the army, (not to play ball), and is now in training at Fort Leonard Wood.

Knowing from experience, McFerren could have made just about anyone's college team, but the Army has got him now, and he is doing a fine job for his company's team. . . . . .

Rolla Miners To Cape Saturday

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Southeast Missouri will be hoping to solidify its second-place standing in the MIAA when it hosts the Miners of the University of Missouri Rolla in an 8 p.m. game Saturday in Houck Field House.

The Indians will also be clinging to slim title hopes, although their 5-2 conference record leaves little practical chance to derail nationally ranked Springfield State, which is breezing along with a 6-0 mark.

Theoretically, all conference teams with the exception of Maryville State, at 1-7, have a mathematical chance to tie for the title, but such an eventuality would require four losses by Springfield in their four remaining conference games. With the odds against such a disaster, the real battle now is for the runnerup spot.

Cape enters Saturday's game the favorite, based on its 74-69 defeat of the Miners last week at Rolla, but the improved UMR squad, which earlier dumped a good Warrensburg team, stands as a major threat. The Miners are also in the running for second place with their 3-4 record, equal on the loss side to Kirksville's 4-4. Warrensburg may yet prove the strongest contender, despite a 2-4 mark.

Pacing the Indian attack both for the season and in last week's fracas at Rolla is center Kermit Meystedt. The 6-6 senior last week boosted his scoring and rebounding averages to 19.2 and 14.2 as he hit 23 points and took 18 rebounds.

The other senior in the Cape starting lineup, guard Curtis Williams, is a closs runnerup in scoring with an 18.0 average. Third in scoring is sophomore forward Dan Milligan with 14.8. Milligan is second in rebounding with a 10.2 average per game.

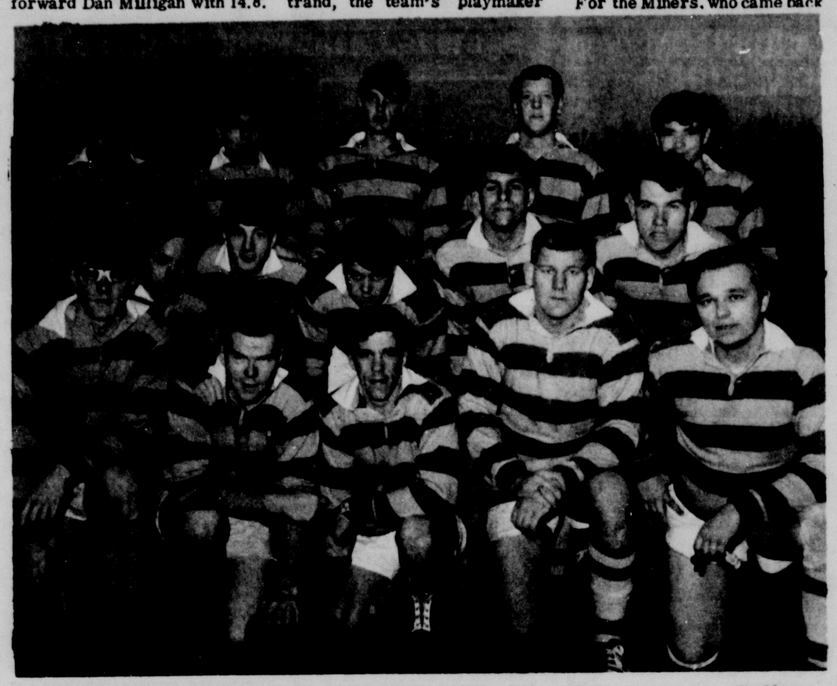

Junior guard Charlie Bertrand, the team's playmaker and one of the top ball-handlers in the conference, is averaging 13.9.

For the Miners, who came back from a 16-point deficit last week against the Indians, to almost pull the game out of the fire, guard Randy Vessell stands out as the top gun with his 19-point average.

Running-mate Charles Andrew is second in average to Vessell, although held to nine points last Saturday.

Mizzou Meets Buffs

COLUMBIA -- The brooding Buffaloes await Ol' Mizzou's invasion out in Boulder Saturday night - and that's more bad news for the Tigers.

Colorado lost a televised basketball game to Oklahoma at Norman Saturday, 71-66, one which they seemingly had wrapped up until the Sooners rallied decisively down the stretch.

So the Buffs' mountain hideout will be a bristling battleground for Missouri, a team that's picked up more than its share of wounds this winter. The Bengals are 3-15 for the year, and 1-6 in conference combat.

Colorado stands 11-7 overall, and is third in the league at 4-2. Tallest regular for Coach Sox Walseth is Bob Bauers, 6-5 senior -- while guards Pat Frink and Lynn Baker are the chief threats. Frink hit spectacularly against O.U., 12 of 18 scrimmage shots, while Baker is a heady, adroit playmaker.

Losing Booker Brown and Gene Jones on grades at the semester, Coach Bob Vanatta and Dave Bennett as starters. At center, 6-8 Rich Milling and 6-5 Gary Frazier have been sharing time -- with flashy-but-erratic Tom Johnson the fifth regular.

Missouri had Oklahoma down, 30-25, just before halftime her Tuesday but O.U., compensating for a 13-point night by Don Sidle, hit 18 of 19 second-half free throws in a 75-65 win.

Coleman now has 1,154 career points -- third-best on M.U.'s all-time chart. The slick-shooting Jefferson Citian is 34 short of Bob Reiter's 1,188 - point harvest, a four-year feat.

Mizzou returns home Tuesday night, meeting Kansas State.

Lincoln Jumps To Seventh

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southern Illinois and Kentucky Wesleyan held firm their 1-2 position as the small college Top Ten basketball poll took in no new faces this week, but dropped an old one.

Southern, 14-2, again drew all but one first place vote with 15 top ballots and 159 points. Wesleyan, 13-1, which yielded the first spot to the Salukis after losing to them earlier, attracted the other first place vote and 143 points.

Cheyney State, 16-1, survived a 63-62 loss to Mansfield and retained third with 107 points.

Southern University was not so fortunate, dropping out of a tie for 10th after losing to Arkansas AM&N 130-109.

San Diego State, 15-3, lost a notch to ninth after dropping a 68-62 decision to Nevada Southern. Tennessee State also fell one place to eighth.

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

WASHPAN AND ROLLER TOWEL

When I was a boy the washpan and roller towel occupied prominent places in the family's scheme of things. On getting up in the morning each member of the family would go immediately to the kitchen to wash their faces and comb their hair in preparation for breakfast. The washpan was set close to the cedar water bucket, from which two or three dippers of water would be transferred to the pan. By its side was a dish of soft soap, which very generally was ignored by the boys.

The girls always were dainty about their ablutions, being careful about getting water on table or floor. Boys went about it very boisterously, dashing the water to their faces and splashing a lot of it on the floor while carrying it up in cupped hands and swishing it back and forth across their faces. The fact that this irritated mother and the girls probably had something to do with the performance.

When the weather was warm the washpan was moved to a keg or box just outside the kitchen door. Those who liked to pose as he-men who could take it would continue to do the job out of doors when a skim of ice had to be broken. There was a place for the roller towel in the kitchen and on the back of the house. It always was close to washpan and water bucket. The allowance usually was one towel for a week. In other words, when each masculine member of the family was getting a fresh shirt and underwear on Sunday morning and each feminine member was getting fresh apparel, all to be worn through the entire ensuing week, a crisp roller towel was put into service. Incidentially, I probably was 12 years old when underwear for boys came into vogue.

The comb, too, was a family institution. It either hung on a string or small chain beside the looking glass or lay in easy reach on a near-by shelf. It received very little wear and tear from the boys.

Only those who lived in the roller towel and cedar-bucket days know the merits of water from a cedar container. Always the bucket was held together by brass bands, which required a considerable amount of polishing. The contrast between that shiny metal and the cedar wood made it a thing of pride and joy to the family.

Those were the days which preceded germs and individual drinking cups. Everybody went to the kitchen when they were thirsty and drank from the same dipper. In our home we sometimes substituted a gourd for that tin utensil. Anybody who has drunk from a gourd will testify that in some mysterious way it enhances the drinking quality of water and makes it more pleasing to the palate. Gourds are still grown on vines in this locality, but only for ornamental purposes.

WHEN TRAMPS WERE NUMEROUS

Tramps were quite numerous during the washpan, roller towel and waterbucket era. Few people turned them away. Some housewives would fill a sack with biscuit, meat and other things that were left from the last meal, handing it to the tramp as he waited outside the kitchen door. At our house, he always was invited into the kitchen and given a seat at the table with the family if his visit came at our meal time. If in mid-morning or mid-afternoon, our mother would give him, a chair and a newspaper and tell him to feel at home while she made hot coffee, fried meat and warmed left-over biscuit. Always, however, he was required to wash and comb his hair. He dried his face on the roller towel and did his combing with the family comb.

My mother gave two reasons for her hospitality. One was that it was a Christian duty. The other was that, having five boys of her own, one who might become a tramp, she would want him treated as well as she treated the wandering son of some other mother who came to her door. After the tramp had gone she also would comfort herself by reflecting that the Scriptures encourage hospitality by saying that there were times when we entertained angels unawares.

During this era, there was not a bathtub in our town. Every family, including the wealthiest, obtained needed water from its own well. Washpans and washbowls were used for bathing purposes. The humorous references now made to Saturday night bathing are inspired by traditions which come down from the washpan and roller towel era, during which people never though of bathing except on that occasion.

Three quarts of water was good for most anybody's bath. But our mothers took nothing for granted when boys returned washpan and soft soap to their place in the kitchen. The ordeal was not over until she had inspected neck and ears, to see that they had not been neglected. Most always, she grabbed washrag and soap, and gave them a real going over for good measure.

THE COMING OF BASEBALL

When I was a boy something new swept like wildfire through the villages, towns and cities of this country. It was the game of baseball. Here in Paris, Mo., it was introduced by a school-teacher named Iglehart. Within a few weeks our team, the Paris Rosebuds, was issuing challenges to what was called match games with Shelbina, Monroe City, Mexico and other towns that were only two to four hours distant by horsedrawn vehicles. With good livery teams, about 10 miles could be covered in one hour.

I recall that in those early days of what is now our great national game the catcher stood about 15 feet behind the batter, taking balls on the bounce. If he caught the bounce on the third strike the batter was out.

Those were difficult days for the Pitcher. This was because the batter had his choice of three sorts of balls. When he stepped into the batter's box the umpire would inquire, "What kind of a ball?" If he said, "A low ball," the delivery must be below the knee. If he said, "A high ball," it would have to be about the shoulder. If he said, "A fair ball" it must be about the waist. Otherwise it was a ball.

To further complicate the pitcher's job, there came a time when underhand delivery was required. Unless the hand swept just below the knee, a ball was called, no matter how nicely it had crossed the plate.

There was a note of chivalry to the game in those early days. It came immediately after the contest was over. The losing side gathered in the pitcher's box and was surrounded by the winners. At a signal from the umpire the winning captain would say "Three cheers for Paris," whereupon the balance of his team would shout, "Hip, hip, hu-ray", all of which would be repeated three imes.

During the first year or two after its introduction, none of the baseball players wore gloves. The first concession to this custom came when catchers began "taking them off the bat," as it was called when they began posting themselves about four feet behind the batters. It then became permissible for the catcher to use an ordinary leather work glove from which the fingers had been cut off. Thus, the palm of the hand was all that was protected.

During the crucial game of a series with Mexico, which was played before the amphitheater on the Paris Fairgrounds, Bob White, editor of the Mexico Ledger, did the umpiring. He was the father of the present editor, L. Mitchell White. Among the large crowd of spectators was Judge Theodore Brace, then Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Missouri. His son, Ned was the Paris team's star performer. It was the first game the Judge had ever seen. Along about the seventh inning a wild ball from the pitcher's box hit Umpire White squarely upon the nose, injuring him so severely that he had to be carried off the field. He got no sympathy from Judge Brace, who said:

"It served him right. That fellow had been standing there interfering ever since the game started."

ANSWERING QUESTIONS at a press conference held at Boston's Logan Airport are a very happy Vladimir Kazen-Kamarek and his wife Dorothy. Vladimir, sentenced to 8 years in prison for "spying", was released after serving 3 months in a Czechoslavakian prison.

Stores to Celebrate 90th Anniversary

Charles Rose, manager of Ben Franklin Store, announced today that more than 2,400 Ben Franklin stores, located in each of the 50 states, plan to stage a year-long celebration during 1967 commemorating the 90th Anniversary of the founders of Ben Franklin stores.

Highlighting the 90th birthday event will be the promotion of 52 key values, one to be featured each week throughout the year at a very low price. Announcement of these special values will be made in this paper throughout the coming year.

Rose explained that his store is participating in a 90th Anniversary nationwide sweepstakes being sponsored by all Ben Franklin stores. Nine "Pick-Your-Trip" prizes will be awarded to nine lucky couples.

First prize will be a two-week, all expense trip for two to anywhere in the world, plus eight second prizes of all-expense trips for two to anywhere in the Continental United States.

Six-Point Plan Urged to Combat Auto Theft

LEE'S SUMMIT (AP) - A six-point program to cope with automobile thefts was outlined Tuesday at a seminar.

William J. Davis, manager of the National Automobile Theft Bureau, spoke to about 175 law enforcement officers. The seminar was sponsored by the bureau and the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Cars valued at $54 million were stolen and not returned in 1966, Davis said. Determined, cooperative efforts of the public, law enforcement agencies and the courts are needed, he said.

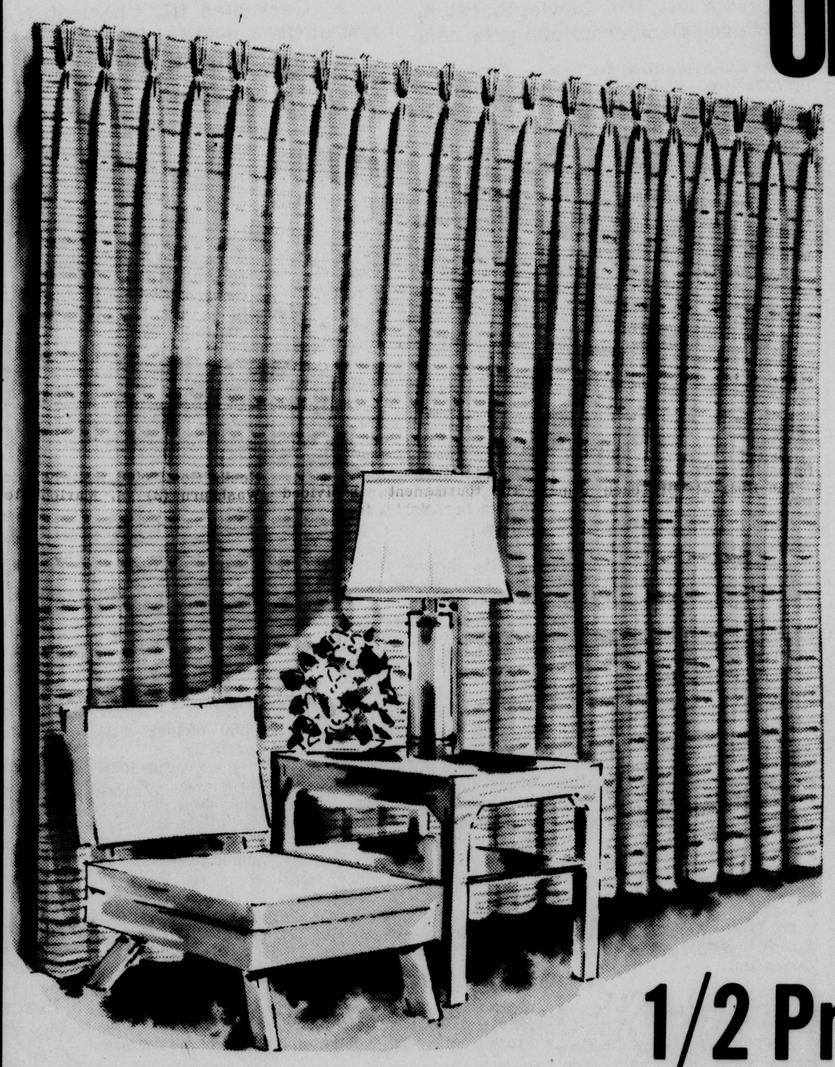

The bureau's suggested program:

1. Municipal ordinances requring motorists to lock their cars.
2. Public support for auto theft preventive measures.
3. Passage of uniform title registration laws by all states.
4. Legislation to stop sale of master keys through mail-order houses.
5. Increased cooperation between the courts and law enforcement officials to prosecute offenders.
6. Car theft preventive measures which could be built-in features on all automobiles. This would include better positioning of locking devices on the instrument panel and making the lock as inaccessible as possible.

Malden Favors School Bond

MALDEN -- Voters approved a $340,000 bond issue in special election Tuesday which will provide a total of 20 additional classrooms, plus library and office space to the Malden School system.

The bond issue, presented for the first time, was adopted by a vote of 581 to 104. It will call for a tax levy increase of 50 cents on $100 property valuation, raising the present levy of $3.30 to $3.80 per $100 valuation.

According to Alva DaVault, superintendent of schools, the funds will be used for the construction of 12 classrooms to be attached to the present junior high school facilities and eight classrooms, a library and office will be added to the Science and Math Building, which was constructed in 1962.

The building additions will be of brick and steel paneling to match the present buildings and will contain approximately 28,000 square feet of new construction. The work is expected to begin on the school additions within 90 days and will be a 10 to 12 month building project, DaVault said.

Town authorities in Herbstein, Germany, decided that every newly married couple must plant three sapling birches on the Strasse der Ehe, or Marriage Road. Within a year, 150 white-barked birch trees stood along the road. Authorities report that the custom is attracting more weddings to Herbstein, and that brides and grooms return on wedding anniversaries to check on their trees.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

A bill now being considered in the Missouri General Assembly, would follow the Governors recommendation for improving the schools foundation program. It would increase the distribution of state money to the schools by $9,975,428.00 per year. Equalization would be increased from $137.25 to $139.25 per pupil in average attendance. A second level equalization which would go to schools voting a sufficiently high local levy to indicate their effort to support their own schools, would be increased from $13 to $14. A flat grant payment on a per pupil enrollment basis would be increased from $122.25 to $132.50. While this is a comparatively small addition in state support for schools, not nearly allowing us to keep up with the other states, it still will be most helpful. Our board has based its improved salary schedule on the probability that this bill for more state funds will be passed.

The climate of interest in better education in the Missouri General Assembly would seem to indicate that the bill will be approved.

Vocational education, such as is provided in our SEMO Trade-Technical Institute and operated by the Board of Education for our school and neighboring schools is expensive. Vocational education requires small classes. The equipment used is very costly. Vocational teachers normally work a longer day, thus earn additional pay. All these factors add to the cost. Our district could not provide this kind of training opportunities for our youth and adults if it had to be paid only from local funds.

Federal funding through the states, makes most of the programs possible, pay some 30% to full costs. The cost per pupil above that provided through Federal funds, in the case of students coming from other schools is paid for by the sending school district.

Four hundred twenty-four students from this school are enrolled in vocational education. One hundred twenty-three students from: Charleston, East Prairie, Matthews, Kelley, Scott Central, Chaffee, and Scott City schools participate. A larger enrollment is expected next year.

The Sikeston Public Schools system is one of the community's largest employers. During the past school year, more than $1.5 million paid in salaries was available as expendable income here. Add to this the money spent for fuel, gasoline and oil, public utilities, insurance, maintenance, supplies and various other services for the instruction of 4000 day students and 1730 adults. The educational and economic importance is apparent.

The field house which is being planned for construction and which along with other needed school additions will be built if the bond issue passes, will be the largest physical education and athletic building between St. Louis and Memphis. Because of its simple construction it will not be the most costly. It will provide space for a much improved physical education and athletic program. It will have enough space to seat 4500-5500 spectators, when this number of seats can be added. The basketball floor and the seating will be removable to allow a large uncluttered floor area for school and community use, large group gatherings and exhibits.

Plans are to add a second level or balcony to the Senior High school library, if the bond issue passes, to provide additional book stack and study space.

Tentative plans are to build a new and much larger study center for the high school some time in the near future, when the funds are available. It would provide not only book and library material space, study areas, but also mechanical or electronic study aids for better learning and research. The present library would then probably be given over to the language arts and social studies department for their specialized uses. The addition of the new learning center may be several years in the future.

About 28,000 school administrators will attend the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators next week. About every problem relating to education and to its improvement will be discussed during the hundreds of small group and general sessions which will be held. Manufacturers and suppliers of educational devices and services will also have exhibits.

The "Full Faith And Credit" Clause of The United States Constitution

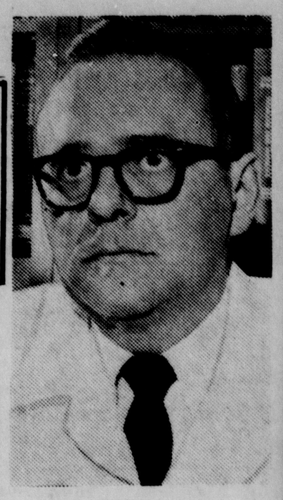

4. CHOICE OF LAW

To the average person involved in a lawsuit, the notion of "choice of law" must seem anomalous. He has no choice of law; he must obey whatever law the court tells him is applicable. However, the court deciding the case has a "choice of law" whenever the transaction involves more than one place. It must decide which body of legal rules to use, its own, or the rules of law laid down by one or another of the various places involved.

As between fully sovereign, independent nations, the use by the courts of one country of the legal rules pertaining elsewhere is not a matter of binding legal obligations. Rather, it rests on civilized notions of fairness which protect the justifiable expectations of the parties by applying to the transaction the rules of law applicable at the place which is connected with the transaction. For example, if two Englishmen make a contract in London to be performed in London, or if they get into an automobile accident in London, they would be very surprised to find that their legal rights and liabilities were going to be determined by the law of Virginia merely because one of them sued the other in a Virginia court.

These fundamental concepts of fairness in the judicial process are embodied in the due process clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, which forbid Federal courts and State courts, respectively, from taking property without due process of law. Thus, the application by an American court of a body of legal principles having nothing whatever to do with a transaction to determine the legal effect of the transaction would be an unconstitutional taking of property without due process of law. This would be true even where the transaction occurred outside of the United States, and hence the requirements of the full faith and credit clause had no application.

Time Against Mao Even If Foes Beaten

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviets and the Chinese Communists each took about 17 years to digest their revolutions, and then they had convulsions. For another 19 years, the Soviets were in Doctor Stalin's sickbed.

The Chinese may recover sooner because of the difference in age between Stalin and Doctor Mao Tse-tung at the time of the convulsions. Mao is an old man. Therein lies, perhaps, the West's best hope for the future.

The murder of a party friend in 1934—17 years after the Bolshevik revolution — gave Stalin the take-off point for wiping out any possible opposition in the bloody purges of the 1930s.

He was 55 when the purges began and he remained in total control another 19 years until his death in 1953, although his energy and [illegible] tracted by World War II.

If there had been no war, the U.S.S.R. might have been different now, and the world also. Certainly if Stalin had lasted longer, the Soviets would have been slower turning toward more moderation.

He had one policy: Progress for the U.S.S.R. And it made progress, industrially and scientifically. But the people paid the price in lives, sacrifices and suppression.

In 1966, Mao, 17 years after his Red Chinese took over mainland China, began his rampage against some of his old associates and the new bureaucracy. Revisionists, he called them, which is another word for reactionaries.

This is what he called the Soviets, to explain his break with them.

If he wins, with his primitive concepts of organizing a nation, he will set China back but that cannot last long. He is 73.

There is a difference between Mao and Stalin seldom mentioned. While Stalin shot his foes and rivals, reports from China do not tell of executions as the solution to differences of opinion. At least, not yet.

When Mao fades or dies, provided he wins now, those closest to him may, like Stalin's lieutenants after his death, repudiate him and seek a more flexible, modern nation. If they try to continue his rigid policies, there may be a revolution by the anti-Maoists who have waited for the chance.

That his extreme policies cannot continue indefinitely seems sure. Like Stalin, Mao was an original revolutionary with all that means in obsession, with an ideology and search for power, self-discipline and self-sacrifice, and total dedication.

But the newer generations of Chinese, lacking the revolutionary experience, cannot help viewing the world and their homeland a little differently. Further, like the Soviet generations which emerged after the Bolshevik revolution, the new Chinese have a growing sense of security in jobs, homes, or party positions.

The penniless, drifting revolutionaries had nothing to lose but their lives. Their successors do. This makes for more reluctance to risk drastic changes or possible loss through internal upheavals or, perhaps, war. When that happens, ideology becomes a little more secondary.

For example: The U.S.S.R.'s present leaders, in control of a vastly developed homeland, will think twice before losing everything in an atomic war.

In time, the Chinese can be expected to do the same. But in the end all this may be something less than an unmixed blessing for the West.

If the new Chinese patch up their quarrel with the Soviets, and the two Communist giants become solid allies, it will be a nightmare power bloc for the West.

641 Boys In Cub Scouting In Okeechobee District

In conjunction with Boy Scout Week recognition is being given area Scout leaders for their service.

Cub Scouting in the Okeechobee district now has 641 boys, 8 to 10, participating. The figure represents 36 per cent of the available boys in the Cub Scout age group.

Sikeston has 231 registered Cub Scouts, serving 44 per cent of the available boys. The program is growing and the outlook for 1967 is promising, Eddie Schrader, Scout executive, said.

The Cub Scouting program provides an opportunity for parents to increase the character development of their children. It also provides the boys with an opportunity to learn from each other.

The program is carried on in the home and in small neighborhood groups (dens), meeting weekly under the leadership of a den mother, assisted by a Boy Scout, or den chief.

An age-graded program of achievement leads boys to the ranks of wolf, bear and lion.

Recognition and encouragement are provided by a monthly pack meeting attended by the boys and parents of all dens. Projects are displayed and awards are made at the monthly meetings.

The program is designed to make the boys strive to do their best, to help others, to improve personal habits, to respect others and develop an understanding of a group relationship, to develop a mutual understanding with parents and to become Boy Scouts.

Stock Market Rough On Impulsive Buyer

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The amateur stock market speculator is one of the most curious psychological packages produced by the human race.

He sometimes forgets so as to hide from pain. He convinces himself that he has learned his lesson, but often just so he can go back for more of the same trouble.

In the market to make a killing - to double his money overnight or make a 50 per cent profit in a week or for some such foolish reason — he also desperately holds to a stock that is going the opposite way.

Said one of them: "It is surprising how one can come to live comfortably with imminent financial ruin, or, at the least, a devastating loss. You get used to living in what is really a rotting structure."

This is the statement of a young man who set out to double his money and, instead, lost an inheritance, his insurance money, his wife's savings and the cash he had set aside for a rainy day.

He listened to hot tips, bought impulsively, fired brokers and hired others whose ethics could be questioned, confused his purposes, adjusted to losses but became even greedier with gains.

Some will recognize his words as those of the Anonymous Investor who wrote the book "Wiped Out." The Anonymous Investor says he lost $60,000, even though the market was rising. The story reads like fiction. The author says it is fact.

One big mutual fund distributor has offered the book to its salesmen in bulk lots for possible distribution to potential customers, for in its own way it is an advertisement for sound management.

This amateur speculator, who didn't have rugs on his Manhattan apartment floor because he needed the money for stocks, lost his money between 1957 and 1964, then wrote a book in which he convinced himself that a lesson was learned.

He is back in the market. "Not heavily," he said in an interview. "I got an advance and I got hold of some other dough." He would, perhaps, have returned long before but "it was academic. I had no dough."

He is behind again.

The advance referred to was a cash payment for his book in advance of publication. Authorship, he feels, has permitted him to talk out his problem, his heartache, his loss.

"It's history. I've learned to live with it."

This man soon will get some more money, the income from sales of his book, which now exceeds 20,000 copies. What will he do with this money?

"I'm going to spend it on the apartment," he said, "and then what's left I'll probably go back into the market with caution, care and patience. I will invest conservatively."

The tight-money situation developing in 1966 is reflected in a downturn in new construction. Residential construction has been dropping off slightly less sharply than the overall total for all types, private and industrial.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"HOUNER"

When I was a teenager my father was a barber at Morley and our home was in the Southeast section of the village. We had a footpath through the park to town.

The park is now fenced in and the ball diamond located there.

At this time it was my duty to sweep and clean the barbershop before my father came to work. While returning home through the park a hound dog was nearby and I stopped and called to him.

He came slinking toward me and came close enough that I petted him and he licked my hand.

He was poor and thin and he stood half-hip high to the average man.

He followed me home and boy we had some dog. Where he came from, we never knew. Someone suggested the name "Houner" and it stuck.

After a few days of food and a lot of love from us boys, we decided to take him hunting. At this time there was much uncleared land and thousands of acres of virgin timber in the foothills and swamps.

On the sandy ridges, many thickets and woodslots remained. Drainage was in its infancy as the area east of the Sikeston ridge was the start of the largest drainage system of the world.

Scott county was at that time the largest grower and shipper of watermelons in the world. Little River and the Caney headwaters flowed down through what was then known as the "Nigger Wool" swamps.

Millions of feet of virgin timber was rafted and loaded to the millponds of Morehouse.

It was a decade more or less before drainage was started in these swamps.

The swamp rabbit that inhabited these swamps was equal in size to the jackrabbit and was rarely seen on the hot sandy ridges. They must require more moisture and cooler ground than the cottontail.

This brings me back to our dog "Houner". When a cottontail was jumped he was our meat as this dog was the fastest that I have ever seen.

Some of the farms were fenced with woven wire and some of the rabbits would go through these fences and try to escape, but "Houner" could sail over these fences like a "pro" steeplechaser and sometimes would almost land on the cottontail.

Naturally he became a favorite in our end of the village. He never bothered anyone or anything - was strictly a home dog.

I will now try and relate one more episode that occurred in his life.

In our town a man named Allen operated a restaurant and he was known as "Butch" Allen by all.

He had two sons that were near the age of my brother and I.

These boys had a dog named "Fritz" and he was the bully of the town.

He stayed in front of the restaurant and was always ready to attack any new dog. He wore a heavy collar of leather and brass and acted like he was the king of dogdom.

One morning as I was going to clean the barbershop I took "Houner" with me. As we walked down the street "Bully Fritz" spied my dog and made the attack and soon they were standing on their hind legs, clawing for the throat. I saw that my dog had torn "Fritz's" collar off and then he had him down with the death grip and we were forced to take my dog off to save their dog's life.

After this "Houner" was allowed to walk the sidewalk as he was the type that never started a quarrel and "Fritz" never wanted anymore of the hound. A hound, when fully aroused, is the most vicious dog on earth.

"Everytime I come to town
People keep kicking my dog around.
Makes no difference if he is a hound
They gotta quit kicking my dog around."

J. C. May

DEER HUNT

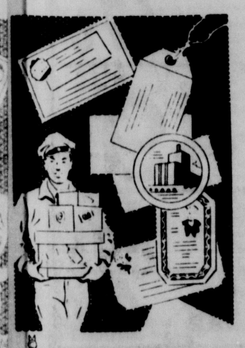

We rode out to the west of town.
It was November, the leaves were brown,
And the wind was pushing against the pines
That stood at the crest of the hill.
We saw it but made no comment.
The deer was motionless,
There by the side of the road.
We had slowed, watching him,
Wondering the way he would go.
There was the shot, he leaped high
And came to rest on the road's edge. . .
Down the bank scrambled the men,
Guns cradled in their arms,
And they gathered round,
Not too close, they feared his kick. . .
But he was dead, and soon they lifted him up
To test his size, his weight, to count his points.
We saw instead his glazed eyes,
Remembered him alive as he stood in our view,
And we drove away.

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

We have not a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weakness, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are, yet without sinning. (Hebrews 4:15, RSV)

PRAYER: Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy Son Jesus, who knows our weaknesses and our strength and loved us enough to give Himself for us, even while we were yet sinners. Forgive us and make us strong, for we come to Thee and offer our prayer in His name. Amen.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married six years. I am 21. Sam is 26. The problem is his temper.

If the car won't start, Sam will break the windshield with his fist or kick a dent in the fender. The shirts had better be ironed perfectly or he will tear them to pieces. Once, when the TV broke, he hit me with the antenna and I had to have 22 stitches in my leg.

It is because of last night that I am writing this letter. I was sitting in the rocking chair reading and all of a sudden Sam yelled, "I can't stand that squeaking noise." He picked up the rocking chair with me in it and heaved it out the front door. My head hit the cement steps and I'm lucky to be alive.

My friends say Sam is a nut and I am crazier than he is for putting up with him. Can you help me? --PURPLE HEARTACHE

Dear Purple: Probably not, because I'm afraid your friends are right. If you didn't switch channels after that 5-star TV performance you must enjoy wearing bandages. So just stay with the lunatic and keep your health and accident insurance up because you're going to need it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a mother with three children under five years of age. They are all sick today because a stupid, inconsiderate relative brought over two youngsters with running noses and hacking coughs.

One of the young visitors was red as a beet and I'm sure he had a temperature. I wouldn't think of taking my children any place when they aren't well. How can some mothers be so dumb? - JUST FUMING

Dear Just: Motherhood is one accomplishment that requires no brains. It is virtually impossible to protect your children against the germs of other children. If some visiting kid doesn't cough in your children's faces, somebody in school will. Your best bet is to see that your youngsters get enough rest, are well-nourished and properly clothed.

Dear Ann Landers: What can I do to keep my mother from ruining my little sister's life as she ruined mine?

I dropped out of school at 15 because my mother was always sick and I had to stay home to take care of her. I flunked so many subjects that finally I gave up.

Now my little sister is falling into the same trap. I would give anything in the world to help her, but I don't know what to do.

Liz is a very smart girl but her grades are poor and she is so far behind now she wants to quit and start over next semester. She is only 14 and I hate to see her louse up her education the way I did.

The doctors can't find anything wrong with Mom but she insists she is sick and can't get out of bed some mornings.

I have given up trying to help Mom but I cannot give up on my little sister. What should I do? - ROPE'S END

Dear R.E.: Children should not be kept home from school to care for ill members of the family. A day or so in an emergency is O.K., but the situation you describe will surely lead to the end of your sister's education. Call your clergyman (or any clergyman) and ask to be put in touch with an agency that will give you the help you need.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents...if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50¢ in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Long Welcomes Words of LBJ

WASHINGTON -- U. S. Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Missouri) today welcomed the President's call for a right of privacy act which was contained in a message on crime in America.

Senator Long said that "I am pleased the President continues to be firmly against wiretapping and eavesdropping. My Senate Subcommittee is in full agreement with the need to protect every American citizen from invasions of privacy by Federal and private agents."

The Missouri Senator said he and his Subcommitteee staff are working with the justice department in drafting specific right to privacy legislation.

After our 2nd-grader had been in school a few weeks of the first term she suddenly decided that she didn't want to eat in the school lunchroom any more.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Oh, the teacher there is always yelling at us," she replied.

"And why does she do that?" I persisted.

"Well," Helen replied, "I suppose that may be so that we won't miss our mothers so much."

Mrs. H. Priday.

In our parish, our Boy Scout group went camping. We had a wonderful time, except that when we went to bed, the mosquitoes were biting furiously.

"Hide your heads under your blankets," I advised my sons when they complained.

Four - year- old Billy peeked out and saw some fireflies.

"It's no use, dad," he told me. "Now they're looking for us with flashlights."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strauss LL.B

THE CASE OF THE RELUCTANT TAXPAYER

Neville had a greater fondness for money than a monkey for a banana and found it very difficult to part with. Consequently, while the years passed by, he passed up paying his income taxes. Just before he died, however, Neville decided that since he couldn't take it with him, he'd cleanse his patriotic conscience and file a late income tax return. Unappreciative of his good intentions, after he escaped to the tax-free land above, the Internal Revenue Department assessed a sizable penalty against Neville's estate for his not having filed a timely return.

"It's absolutely ridiculous," protested the administrator of Neville's estate. "A penalty is intended to penalize. Since Neville's dead, you obviously can't penalize him. He's beyond mortal reach."

"You can't avoid paying taxes by dying," retorted a tax official. Whether a person's breathing or not, he's subject to the tax law."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit a dead man to be penalized?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided with the tax department. In doing so, he held that a penalty for filing a late income tax return may be imposed upon a taxpayer whether he is dead or alive.

(Based upon a 1956 U.S. Court of Appeals Decision)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

While a person is permitted to represent himself in his own lawsuit, he does so at a considerable risk since he will be entitled to no special privileges in doing so and will be bound by the same procedures and rules as a lawyer. (For personal guidance, see your local attorney.)

"Today, progressive taxation places limits on the earning power of the businessman, and hence upon his purely monetary motivation. More and more he draws his incentive from a sense of public responsibility. More and more, I believe, idealistic and progressive young people will seek and find in industry not just a road to personal enrichment, but a most direct and effective means of public service."

(delivered May 29, 1955)
Robert S. McNamara.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1861, the Congress of the Confederate States of America organized its government, electing Jefferson Davis provisional president and Alexander Stephens vice president. In 1865, on this same date, Gen. Robert E. Lee was made commander-in-chief of Confederate armed forces.

On this date:

In 1718, French colonists arrived in Louisiana.

In 1773, the ninth president of the United States, William Henry Harrison, was born.

It was approved with only one amendment that would require the authority pay the costs of relocating utility lines and building grade separations.

Under the plan, the turnpike authority would consist of the state highway commission plus the governor. It would have the power to select sites, after feasibility studies, and issue revenue bonds to finance construction.

Rex M. Whitton, former chief engineer of the Missouri Highway Commission who resigned recently as head of the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads, said the toll road approach is the only feasible way to build high type safe roads in rural areas.

He foresaw no chance of any great increase in the present interstate system within the foreseeable future and said toll roads would free more money for use in crowded urban areas for expressways.

Two bills to raise University of Missouri and state college tuition and the tuition of out-of-state students failed to clear the Senate Education Committee.

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, proposed that only the top 12½ per cent of a high school graduating class be permitted to enroll at the university and the top 40 per cent at state colleges and Lincoln University.

He said too many students who could be educated at junior colleges or vocational schools are overcrowding the colleges and M. U.

Wednesday night the capitol braced itself for an expected invasion when the House Constitutional Amendments Committee held a hearing on the school bus bill.

Two weeks ago more than 1,000 people came in a rainstorm to oppose the shared time bill and its was expected that the even more controversial school bus bill would draw an even bigger crowd.

Instead, those in favor of providing bus transportation to all school students, whether in private, parochial or public schools seemed to be almost in a majority. The hearing went off without any audience interference or participation.

The familiar garb of the Catholic clergy and nuns was in evidence.

After the usual arguments about the constitutionality of the resolution, the committee adjourned without taking action.

Rep. Charles Sheehan, D-House Springs, chairman, said he expected the committee to act next week.

If approved by both houses, the issue of whether private and parochial school students can ride public school buses will be put before the people of the state at the next election in the form of a constitutional amendment.

Earlier the House refused to accept the recommendations of the Senate on an $8 million emergency appropriations bill, heading it for conference committee settlement.

er extension of the cease-fire.

Johnson told the Pope "I devoutly share your wish that the suspension of hostilities over the lunar new year may be extended and may open the way for negotiations for a just and stable peace.

"The governments of the United States and the Republic of Vietnam, together with others," the President continued, "are devoting intensive efforts to that end.

"As you know the government of Vietnam has twice signified its readiness to discuss an extension of the truce with representatives of the other side. We are prepared to talk at any time and place, in any forum, with the object of bringing peace to Vietnam."

It was at this point that Johnson said he knew Pope Paul would not expect the United States to cut back its military action unless the other side did so.

But the President added: "We are prepared to discuss the balanced reduction in military activity, the cessation of hostilities, or any practical arrangements which could lead to these results."

Administration officials continued to assert privately that the primary thrust of recent North Vietnam offers so far is to bring maximum pressure on the United States to stop bombing North Vietnam.

They argued that so far the North Vietnamese have said only that talks with the United States "could" start if the bombings were stopped unconditionally. They argued that North Vietnam deliberately has stopped short of saying that talks "would" start, which would amount to a proposal to which the United States would have to react.

At high levels in the administration officials insisted also that all peace probes through many foreign governments so far have failed to produce an opening for talks. But they did not rule out the possibility that the situation could change at any moment.

Large Freshman Class May Have GOP Influence

WASHINGTON (AP) - Freshman House Republicans, comprising nearly one-third of the party's membership, may become a significant power factor in the 90th Congress.

Like all freshmen classes, they have a club which plans to meet regularly. But unlike most, their numbers are such - 59 of 187 GOP House members - that they could make their influence felt.

"We're not trying to go out as a bloc, although on occasion that might happen," says Rep. William A. Steiger of Wisconsin, secretary of the 90th club.

Rep. William O. Cowger of Kentucky, former Louisville mayor and president of the club, said in a separate interview "I'm not interested in power."

But the Kentucky congressman said "we're probably going to be a close-knit group" and predicted the club sometimes may take positions on legislation or other House issues.

"If it's a group position, it probably could" influence the outcome, he added.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT LAUNCHES PROGRAM OF REFLECTIVE PAINTING ON BRIDGES AS SAFETY MEASURE

Missouri's narrow bridges are being outlined with reflective paint under a new safety program, the State Highway Department announced today.

M. J. Snider, chief engineer, said that about 3200 bridges in the state would be painted. The reflective paint is applied to the end posts and on the edges of railing posts along the bridges. About 150 bridges have been painted so far in the program.

Department maintenance forces are doing the work. The paint, applied by brush or roller, costs about $4 a pound. At 12 pounds per gallon, that's about $48 a gallon. Snider said that $90,000 had been budgeted for the program during the calendar year and that he hoped that would cover the entire program.

"We believe that this relatively small cost will bring big dividends in safety for drivers on Missouri's highways," said Snyder. "The painted areas are visible at night as soon as a car's headlights shine on them. Thus the driver can see clearly the outline of the bridge."

Under the program, the paint will be applied to all bridges which are not two feet wider than the approaching roadway. Bridges on heavily traveled routes will be painted first.

The paint cannot be applied when the temperature drops below 50 degrees so the entire program may not be completed until this spring or early summer. The paint is expected to last from five to seven years.

Johnson Says Longer Truce Being Explored

Snub Leads to Filing

Hugh T. McCollum, office manager of Fusz - Schmelzle & Co. Inc. and commander of the civil air patrol squadron, filed for election to the city council Wednesday afternoon.

McCollum said today that he filed because he had not received a preliminary prospectus concerning the sale of $1,200,000 in water and sewer bonds. He said he had asked the mayor and city manager that he be notified of the sale.

McCollum said he received a letter today from Manuel Drumm, city attorney, apologizing for not listing the company McCollum represents on the mailing list for bidders on the bonds.

More than 60 banks and bonding companies in St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, New York and Memphis were notified, Drumm said.

Drumm said that he took full responsibility for the "oversight."

McCollum said he accepted the apology but has no intention of withdrawing from the council race.

"I may withdraw later, if a man files," he said. "I just don't know right now."

McCollum filed for the post now occupied by Arthur Ziegenhorn, whose term expires April 4. Ziegenhorn has refiled.

Students Carry Protests to Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. AP -- University of California students are carrying to Gov. Ronald Reagan today their protests against his proposals that tuition be charged and budgets cut for higher education.

Saying the protest would be dignified, students from Santa Barbara, UCLA and other Southern California campuses are joining others from the campuses at Berkeley and Davis and Sacramento State College for a march to the Capitol from a park about six blocks away.

A student representative estimated the number of marchers between 2,000 and 3,000 with all nine UC campuses represented.

The leader of the group is Jay Jeffcoat, president of the Associated Students of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Students also are visiting offices of senators and assemblymen, the spokesman said.

The vehicle failed to make a turn, left the road and struck an embankment.

The driver received cuts on his face and leg and a passenger, Billy Mays, 15, Matthews, received a broken nose.

Both were treated at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Message to Pope Leaves Door Open

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has messaged Pope Paul VI that the United States is participating in "intensive efforts" to extend the current cease- fire in Vietnam into a prolonged truce for peace negotiations.

But administration officials said privately that despite a possible brief extension of the cease - fire they are skeptical of a breakthrough toward a peace settlement at this time.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is due to sum up the peace probe maneuvers in a 4 p.m. EST news conference today. The White House called special attention to Rusk's conference by announcing it late Wednesday at the same time it released Johnson's answer to the Pope's latest peace appeal.

In the message Johnson kept open the possibility of a Vietnamese truce extension but virtually ruled out again any longterm halt in the bombing of North Vietnam not compensated by a scaling - down of North Vietnam's military action.

The lunar new year truce in Vietnam is now in its second day. The United States and South Vietnam announced weeks ago they would stop fighting for four days.

Subsequently the Communists called for a seven-day cease-fire and the allies responded with a proposal for talks about the conditions of a prolonged suspension of hostilities. The bombing of North Vietnam is suspended during the truce now in effect.

Since the truce began shooting incidents have been reported in the South. In the North, U. S. aircraft continued to fly reconnaissance missions and one plane was shot down Wednesday.

The State Department and Department of Defense declined to treat the plane loss a major incident of truce violation. Defense officials indicated that North Vietnamese action against reconnaissance flights was to be expected.

Two possibilities for a truce extension appear to be open. One is that the United States and South Vietnam could extend it for the additional three days proposed by the Communist side even without agreeing on terms and conditions with enemy representatives.

The second possibility is that some arrangement still might be made with the Communists on conditions for a much long-

New Redistrict Plan Presented in House

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A new congressional redistricting bill—the closest yet to the Supreme Court's one man-one vote rule — hit the Missouri House today.

It was sponsored by Rep. J. Anthony Dill, R-Affton. Under his plan districts would vary from the population norm of 431,981 by only slightly more than one per cent for the largest district, the 1st in St. Louis, to slightly under one per cent for the smallest, the 9th of northeastern Missouri.

A bill by Sen. Omar H. Avery D-Troy, with a population variance of about 6 per cent, is scheduled for its first hearing next Monday.

In the Senate, Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, returned on crutches after a near fatal automobile accident Nov. 22. He got out of the hospital only Wednesday, but promptly made his voice heard in opposition to a bill to provide state aid for kindergartens.

He said he was not against kindergartens but charged the bill was just "another effort by the omnivorous teachers' lobby to ram through another pay raise.

"This is just a plain, old-fashioned, garden variety pay raise."

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, offered an amendment to limit the increased $5,162,000 under the school foundation program strictly for kindergarten use.

The Senate was still debating this proposal at noon and the bill had to be laid over when the Senate quit work until Monday.

The House received a bill to guarantee a minimum hourly wage of $1.25 except for farm workers, domestic help, executive and administrative positions, government employes, salesmen, educational and charitable workers and anyone under 18 years old.

It also tackled a bill to require payment of prevailing wages on all public works but opposition arose and the bill had to be laid over.

The Senate received a bill to allow dissemination of information about contraception and birth control. It was offered by Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Clayton.

One of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' major recommendations—to create a toll turnpike authority—won Senate committee approval Wednesday.

Snow Collapses Roof During Church Service

BALTIMORE, Md. AP -- The roof of a Roman Catholic church sagged under heavy snow and collapsed with a roar during Mass early today, injuring more than a score of persons.

The first department said 20 to 30 victims had been taken to hospitals from the St. Rose of Lima church.

There were an estimated 100 children and 20 adults in the church in the Brooklyn Park area of south Baltimore when the roof collapsed, firemen said. All were removed from the building.

One of the children, George Feely Jr., 7, a third-grader at St. Rose School next door, escaped out the back of the church.

He said he was about seven pews from the altar and heard something that "sounded like a door shutting."

"I saw something come down," he said. "It was the ceiling."

The roof collapsed following a snowfall of about 11 inches earlier this week.

The roof fell into the portion of the building housing the chapel, buckling and collapsing in the middle. The front and rear of the building remained upright.

Hahn Appeals Contest

The attorney for Harold Hahn in the contest of election of Aubrey Michael as county collector today filed an appeal with the circuit clerk's office in Benton to have the case heard by the Missouri Supreme Court.

The appeal is based on the grounds that the judge -- in ruling to dismiss the notice of contest of election -- did not follow the law.

Hahn's attorney said today, "Our sole position in the appeal is that the order issued by the judge was contrary to the law."

He said the case will be heard by the State Supreme Court either in the present session of the court, which ends in June, or will be in the next session, which opens in October.

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig ruled in favor of Aubrey Michael in the contest of election filed for the office of Scott county collector of revenue by Harold Hahn Feb. 2.

Hahn came within 345 votes of winning the Nov. 8 election as a write - in candidate for the office of collector, according to the official count.

Hahn's attorney filed the first notice of election contest with Circuit Clerk Lynn Ingram on Nov. 17. A second amended notice containing allegations of voting fraud at 17 Scott county precincts was filed Dec. 22.

A hearing on the motions involved in the contest was held Jan. 26 in circuit court at Benton. Following the hearing, the judge took under advisement three motions including the motion to dismiss the second amended notice filed by Hahn.

Judge Craig listed eight reasons for his ruling to dismiss. Among the reasons, the judge said the notice of election contest failed to state sufficient grounds to warrant a recount.

Fire Burns Hay At M & M Grain

An unprotected electrical wire set fire to a stack of hay outside the M & M Grain Co., Highway 60 East in Miner, Wednesday afternoon. No damage to the building was caused.

Sikeston firemen were called at 2:11 p.m. and returned to the station at 2:35 p.m.

Hearnes Dedicates First 2 Regional Plan Commissions

WEST PLAINS (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes dedicated the first two Regional Planning Commissions in Missouri today, expressing the hope they could bridge the gap between social needs and technological advances.

He spoke first at West Plains, then flew to Poplar Bluff for a similar ceremony.

In a speech prepared for the West Plains meeting he said tremendous technological advances in the "soaring sixties" have placed a severe strain on the social structure.

"The conflicts and confusions we experience in our everyday relationships," he said, "are primarily occasioned by our inability to close the gap between learning and understanding, and the vast advances resulting from space-age research.

He told the South Central Ozark Regional Planning Commission its main concern will be to plan and develop a system of better roads, schools, parks, social and cultural activities.

But he warned that "planning is useless and can be a trial and tribulation to the people unless their personal welfare is considered as important in any final decisions."

The governor said "planning and people are the necessary common elements to achieve the desired result of a better tomorrow for this region."

Hearnes sounded a similar note in a ceremony two hours later at Poplar Bluff. He said both regions offer marvelous opportunities for development of human, natural and economic resources through sound planning.

He said the "society-technology gap" must be closed by sound local planning because it "even now raises a discordant note of alarm in our society and threatens to bring havoc and ruin" to social and economic progress.

"We cannot fail because we do not wish the federal government to fill the vacuum that we would create by our own inaction."

Jaycees to Search For Outstanding Teacher

The Junior Chamber of Commerce announced plans to select the outstanding young educator in Sikeston to spotlight achievement and dedication of professional educators between 21 and 35.

The contest was announced Wednesday afternoon at a meeting of the Sikeston Community Teachers Association in the high school cafetorium by James D. Sickal, chairman of the project.

"Our search is part of a nationwide Jaycee program," Sickal said.

The contest is open to both men and women teaching in grades 1 through 12.

Names for nomination may be submitted by anyone. Persons wishing to nominate a teacher are asked to send the name and school address to Sickal, Box 805, or call GR 1-1000.

A screening committee was selected by Glenn Jones, president of the teachers association, to help Sickal select final nominees. Persons named to the committee are: Harold Khiene, director of secondary education; Robert G. Miller, director of elementary education; Donald Fulton, principal of Lincoln school; Mrs. Annette French, Lee Hunter teacher; Mrs. James Beaird, junior high school teacher, and Mrs. Tony Statler, high school teacher.

Nominations will be judged by a panel of civic leaders. The winner will be honored at a special awards banquet and presented with a certificate and a $50 savings bond.

Winners from throughout the state will be eligible for a state competition, which will determine delegates to a national outstanding young educator program, Sickal said.

Violations of Lunar Truce Rated Minor

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) - The lunar new year truce eased through its second day today with neither side in the Vietnam war claiming a major violation. But U.S. and Vietnamese military authorities reported 114 incidents, and said 28 were considered significant.

Among the significant actions was a seven-hour fire fight between a company of the 173rd Airborne Brigade and an estimated 30 Viet Cong Wednesday in war Zone D north of Saigon. A U.S. spokesman said the American company of about 120 infantrymen suffered moderate casualties. Two Viet Cong were reported killed.

He said the Americans were moving to a new position and the guerrillas opened up from bunkers and trees. The Viet Cong used more than 100 hand grenades, rifle fire and a Claymore mine in the engagment, the spokesman said, while the Americans called in artillery and air strikes. The air attacks continued for four hours while the Americans removed their wounded, the spokesman reported.

The U.S. comapny was making a "positioning movement" and was not conducting an offensive operation, the spokesman said. He gave no further details.

With at least two more days to go in the cease-fire and all reports for the second day not yet in, the number of incidents was running slightly behind the total of 122 reported during the two-day truce at Christmas. But it was considerably below the 178 for the same cease-fire period over the New Year's weekend.

Vandals Paint Two Vehicles

Sikeston police received two reports Wednesday night from residents of Matthews street stating that vandals had thrown green paint on a car and a pickup truck.

The damaged car is owned by Carter Bell, 511 Matthews, and the pickup truck is owned by Dorma Angle, 414 Matthews, police said.

In other police activity, Dixie Stewart, route three, was charged by police Wednesday with careless and imprudent driving, police reported.

James Phillips Sr., 241 East Kathleen, was charged by police with allowing his dog to run unleashed.

Frank William, Poplar Bluff, was arrested by police Tuesday on East Malone and charged with intoxication, police said.

Precious Wade, Poplar Bluff, was arrested Tuesday on East Malone and charged with operating a vehicle with improper registration, exceeding the speed limit and driving without an operator's license, police reported.

Three motorists were charged by police Tuesday with running a stop sign on North West street: Larry Parks, 310 Virginia; Donald C. Lewis, 101 Salcedo road, and Patricia E. Barnes, Morehouse.

Powell Rapped for Refusal to Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a select House committee looking into Adam Clayton Powell's qualifications to be seated said today they think the Harlem Democrat has hurt his chances by refusing to answer some of its questions.

Powell, acting on the advice of his lawyers, cited constitutional objections Wednesday as he refused to discuss his New York legal difficulties and charges he misused government travel funds.

There was widespread feeling, both within and outside of the committee, that he had made it difficult for Democrats who want to find some way to seat him.

Some felt that his legal objections, essentially that the select committee should confine itself to the constitutional requirements of age, citizenship and inhabitancy in considering his qualifications, were intended mainly for use in a later court challenge to any unseating move.

"I think he made a mistake in not taking the opportunity to explain the allegations against him," said Rep. Charles M. Teague, R-Calif.

And a Democratic member, Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida, said "I regret that Mr. Powell didn't make a full response to all the questions. It would have afforded him a good opportunity to comment on some of the impressions people have gotten about his activities."

Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., asked about the probable effect of Powell's performance, said, "You will have to be the judge of that. But it certainly didn't help him."

Celler said the committee planned to call additional witnesses before it reports back to the House Feb. 23. The House set this deadline Jan. 10 when it voted 364 to 64 to have Powell stand aside until a select committee could determine his qualifications.

In rejecting Powell's contention that the probe should be confined to whether he possesses the constitutional requirements of being 25, a citizen for seven years and an inhabitant of the state which chooses him, Celler said the House gave the committee a "very broad" mandate.

"Without benefit of your testimony," Celler told him, "the committee will have to draw upon other sources." He said it "has no alternative but to draw whatever inferences may flow from whatever public record has been made."

These presumably would include the findings of a House administration subcommittee that Powell used official funds for private travel and had his wife on the payroll even though she lives in Puerto Rico. Also included could be four arrest orders for contempt of court now outstanding in New York as a result of a long unpaid court judgment.

Powell asked permission to make a statement to the committee, but Celler said Powell had lost his right to speak by refusing to answer questions.

"They broke their agreement," Powell told newsmen outside the hearing room. Then he delivered portions of his statement before television cameras, telling "my dear colleagues" that "Adam Clayton Powell is not on trial today, but the United States Constitution is."

Powell did not disclose his plans, but a New York lawyer who handles his business affairs, Seymour Barash, told reporters he is planning a nationwide speaking tour for Powell this spring.

The Harlem Democrat will be accompanied by a singing group from Bimini, the Bahamas, Barash said, adding that the purpose of the trip will be to pay off the rest of the New York court judgment and heavy legal fees in connection with it.

Rising Gas Prices Defy Usual Winter Pattern

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline price increases by major oil companies are spreading across the country.

The boosts of one cent a gallon at service stations are unseasonal and came in the wake of rising demand and higher labor costs.

Gulf Oil Co. Wednesday became the latest company to join the price rise parade. The advance affects all of the company's outlets except in the West Coast area.

Earlier, American Oil Co., Continental Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co., and Sunray Dx Oil Co. announced price boosts.

Gulf gave no reason for the increase, but a Gulf contract agreement last month set a general pattern for numerous new settlements between oil refiners and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union.

The general pattern included a 14-cent hourly pay hike immediately and a 4 per cent increase next January.

The wage levels were not immediately available.

Gasoline prices at this time of year normally go down instead of up. Wintry weather cuts driving and this leads to a buildup of inventories of motor fuel.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that gasoline stocks now are about 10 million barrels above inventories one year ago. But demand has been climbing. An industry source put consumption of gasoline at more than 4.6 million barrels daily, more than 4.5 per cent above a year ago.

The institute said service station prices for regular grade gasoline averaged 32½ cents a gallon last December.

Bureau of Public Roads figures show that there were 91.7 million motor vehicles registered in the United States at the end of 1965. Total motor vehicle fuel consumption for that year was 71.1 billion gallons, an average of 775 gallons per vehicle.

Of these vehicles, 76.6 million were passenger cars, which consumed 49.7 billion gallons of motor fuel, an average of 649 gallons per car.

Four Bridges To Improve Drainage

MEMPHIS -- Paul Montgomery, Inc., Poplar Bluff, was today awarded a $149,875 contract for constructing four county bridges across ditch 251 in New Madrid County, Mo.

In announcing the contract award, Col. James A. Vivian, Memphis district engineer, said that the bridge construction is in connection with the enlargement of the ditch to improve Little River drainage under the St. Francis Basin project.

The four bridges will be located between Lone Star and the junction of ditch 251 with Otter slough, north of Lilbourn.

Work will commence in 30 days and be completed in 12 months, Colonel Vivian said.

Restaurant Fire Cause Remains Undetermined

MONTGOMERY, ALA. (AP) - Fire Department officials continued their search today for the cause of a flash fire which swept through a plush penthouse restaurant Tuesday night claiming 25 lives.

Funeral services for some of the victims were held today with others scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Fire Chief W. T. Mallory said his men were still interviewing witnesses in an effort to determine the cause of the blaze at Dale's Penthouse.

Victims of the worst fire in Montgomery's history included a former member of the State Public Service Commission, Ed Pepper, and a top official of the International Teamsters Union, Sidney Zagri of Washington.

The wife of the Montgomery Advertiser's sports editor, Jack Doane, died in the flames which swept the restaurant where she was a hostess.

Employes of the fashionable dining spot, and diners who were able to escape, said the fire started in a cloakroom and spread out of control before it could be extinguished.

There was no immediate explanation for the speed with which the flames enveloped the penthouse.

Some diners and employes escaped before the elevators failed and others managed to reach the roof through windows. Firemen led them to safety after the flames were controlled.

The restaurant is located atop the 10-story Walter Bragg Smith apartment hotel in downtown Montgomery.

John English, a part owner of the restaurant, estimated the damage at about $135,000.

Taylor Rates Peace Conditions Improved

LAS CRUCES, N. M. AP -- Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former U. S. ambassador to South Vietnam, says conditions for a negotiated peace in Vietnam have become more favorable.

But Taylor told an audience Wednesday night at New Mexico State University that "as far as he knew," there had been no tangible evidence of progress toward negotiations. He said that if North Vietnam should put out a peace feeler, it would be done so quietly and carefully that "you and I won't know anything about it."

Speaking before 1,500 persons, Taylor said that Hanoi, Peking and Moscow have started a propaganda campaign "to convince the U. S. that a halt to bombing of North Vietnam is the only chance for peace."

Taylor speaks tonight at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, where a group of students began a "peace vigil" Wednesday night. About 30 students were in the university's concert hall, where Taylor was to speak, reading, playing a phonograph and fasting.

They said they would stay until after Taylor's speech.

Dexter Soldier Killed

DEXTER AP -- The parents of a Dexter soldier said today they had been notified by the Defense Department that their son had been killed in action in South Vietnam.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sisler said they had a telegram that their son, Lt. Kenneth Sisler, 29, was killed Jan. 7 by small arms fire near Da Nang.

Sisler also is survived by his wife, Jane, and two small children, all of Dexter.

Quake Hits Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - A severe earthquake hit Colombia today and first accounts indicated at least 25 were dead and many injured.

The quake was felt throughout the nation, and especially in the cities of Bogota, Calif., Pereira, Medellin, Bucaramanga and Cucuta. Neighboring Venezuela also was shaken.

Panic was widespread in Colombia. Phones and other communications failed in many areas.

The quake was recorded at 10:27 a.m. EST, in both Colombia and Venezuela.

International communications out of Bogota were cut off for more than an hour after the quake hit.

Thousands fled into the streets of Bogota, the capital.

The quake in Venezuela was lighter, judging from first reports.

In Washington, scientists of the Coast and Geodetic Survey's national earthquake information center said the quake's magnitude was between 6 3/4 and 7. This would mean it was "potentially damaging" to any buildings in the immediate area, they said.

Thompson Gets Change Of Venue

BENTON -- Tommy Lee Thompson, 18, Sikeston, charged with burglary and stealing, was granted a change of venue to Stoddard county today in circuit court at Benton.

The attorney for Thompson had filed for a change of venue both from the judge and from the people.

Thompson is charged in connection with the Feb. 17, 1965, burglary of the Daris Burgess residence, 842 Ruth in Sikeston.

Thompson was acquitted of a first degree murder charge Dec. 9, 1966, in circuit court at Jackson in connection with the Feb. 1, 1965, slaying of Mrs. W. R. Lewis, Sikeston.

Death Toll May Reach 100 in Tasmanian Fire

HOBART, Tasmania (AP) - The death toll in Tasmania's disastrous bush and forest fires could reach at least 100, a senior police officer said today as flames roared out of the bush again to threaten more towns.

Police, firemen and 50 prisoners released from Hobart's jail were rushed to the orchard country at Huonville, 20 miles south of the island state's capital, where a northwest wind was pushing the fire toward houses.

Fifty more prisoners were trucked to the Bagdad area, 30 miles north of Hobart, where another blaze threatened to break from the bushland.

The confirmed toll so far was 49 dead, hundreds hurt and 3,500 homeless. The senior police officer said it might take a week to get an accurate count of the dead.

Eight towns were reported wiped out. Among 700 buildings destroyed were 650 houses. The others included hotels, schools, offices and factories.

Tens of thousands of apples, the Huon Valley's main crop, were ruined in the more than 10,000 acres burned over. The Derwent Valley, Tasmania's hop-growing center, had 500 persons without food or shelter.

Hundreds of head of livestock were killed. Thousands of workers and children were idle because factories and schools were razed. Smoke rose 10,000 feet over Hobart.

Workers struggled through the night to restore power, water and communications to outlying townships.

Hearnes Calls for New Government Concept

POPLAR BLUFF (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes called today for a "new philosophy of limited government close to the people to guarantee the future of our democratic system."

Hearnes, a Democrat from Southeastern Missouri, has been a frequent critic of Johnson Administration policies and the growth of centralized government.

In a speech prepared for a joint service club luncheon, he renewed his appeal for "block grants" - a return of some federal revenue to the states.

If Congress does not approve such a proposal, he suggested that the states resort to the initiative method of calling a Constitutional Convention to propose a constitutional amendment authorizing Congress to return a part of the federal income tax to the states.

He said the people "can accept the central government theory as being the panacea of all our community ills" or "we here in Missouri-who believe in the theory of limited government close to and the servant of the people-can lead the nation in achieving the coveted goal."

States must re-examine their role, he said, in developing strong and stable local government.

"Legislation is necessary to strengthen the powers of local government and to encourage cooperative approaches to common problems. The regional concept-for instance-is an excellent vehicle for common problem solving and a worthy substitute for our present proliferation of government units."

The governor earlier today dedicated Missouri's first two Regional Planning Commissions at West Plains in the south central Ozarks and at Poplar Bluff

He urged the civic club members to recruit others to the cause of limited government close to the people."

"There are problems of financing government in a way that is fair and equitable to all without stifling growth of our economic system," he said.

"There are social problems connected with the aged, the youth and the poor. There are problems of providing a better education for more and more people. There are the moral problems of maintaining a society with a proper sense of values.

"There is the paramount problem . . . to review and redefine the role of government at the federal, state and local level."

Johnson Says Longer Truce Being Explored

Snub Leads to Filing

Hugh T. McCollum, office manager of Fusz - Schmelzle & Co. Inc. and commander of the civil air patrol squadron, filed for election to the city council Wednesday afternoon.

McCollum said today that he filed because he had not received a preliminary prospectus concerning the sale of $1,200,000 in water and sewer bonds. He said he had asked the mayor and city manager that he be notified of the sale.

McCollum said he received a letter today from Manuel Drumm, city attorney, apologizing for not listing the company McCollum represents on the mailing list for bidders on the bonds.

More than 60 banks and bonding companies in St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, New York and Memphis were notified, Drumm said.

Drumm said that he took full responsibility for the "oversight."

McCollum said he accepted the apology but has no intention of withdrawing from the council race.

"I may withdraw later, if a man files," he said. "I just don't know right now."

McCollum filed for the post now occupied by Arthur Ziegenhorn, whose term expires April 4. Ziegenhorn has refiled.

Students Carry Protests to Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. AP -- University of California students are carrying to Gov. Ronald Reagan today their protests against his proposals that tuition be charged and budgets cut for higher education.

Saying the protest would be dignified, students from Santa Barbara, UCLA and other Southern California campuses are joining others from the campuses at Berkeley and Davis and Sacramento State College for a march to the Capitol from a park about six blocks away.

A student representative estimated the number of marchers between 2,000 and 3,000 with all nine UC campuses represented.

The leader of the group is Jay Jeffcoat, president of the Associated Students of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Students also are visiting offices of senators and assemblymen, the spokesman said.

Message to Pope Leaves Door Open

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has messaged Pope Paul VI that the United States is participating in "intensive efforts" to extend the current cease- fire in Vietnam into a prolonged truce for peace negotiations.

But administration officials said privately that despite a possible brief extension of the cease - fire they are skeptical of a breakthrough toward a peace settlement at this time.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is due to sum up the peace probe maneuvers in a 4 p.m. EST news conference today. The White House called special attention to Rusk's conference by announcing it late Wednesday at the same time it released Johnson's answer to the Pope's latest peace appeal.

In the message Johnson kept open the possibility of a Vietnamese truce extension but virtually ruled out again any longterm halt in the bombing of North Vietnam not compensated by a scaling - down of North Vietnam's military action.

The lunar new year truce in Vietnam is now in its second day. The United States and South Vietnam announced weeks ago they would stop fighting for four days.

Subsequently the Communists called for a seven-day cease-fire and the allies responded with a proposal for talks about the conditions of a prolonged suspension of hostilities. The bombing of North Vietnam is suspended during the truce now in effect.

Since the truce began shooting incidents have been reported in the South. In the North, U. S. aircraft continued to fly reconnaissance missions and one plane was shot down Wednesday.

The State Department and Department of Defense declined to treat the plane loss a major incident of truce violation. Defense officials indicated that North Vietnamese action against reconnaissance flights was to be expected.

Two possibilities for a truce extension appear to be open. One is that the United States and South Vietnam could extend it for the additional three days proposed by the Communist side even without agreeing on terms and conditions with enemy representatives.

The second possibility is that some arrangement still might be made with the Communists on conditions for a much long-

New Redistrict Plan Presented in House

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A new congressional redistricting bill—the closest yet to the Supreme Court's one man-one vote rule — hit the Missouri House today.

It was sponsored by Rep. J. Anthony Dill, R-Affton. Under his plan districts would vary from the population norm of 431,981 by only slightly more than one per cent for the largest district, the 1st in St. Louis, to slightly under one per cent for the smallest, the 9th of northeastern Missouri.

A bill by Sen. Omar H. Avery D-Troy, with a population variance of about 6 per cent, is scheduled for its first hearing next Monday.

In the Senate, Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, returned on crutches after a near fatal automobile accident Nov. 22. He got out of the hospital only Wednesday, but promptly made his voice heard in opposition to a bill to provide state aid for kindergartens.

He said he was not against kindergartens but charged the bill was just "another effort by the omnivorous teachers' lobby to ram through another pay raise.

"This is just a plain, old-fashioned, garden variety pay raise."

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, offered an amendment to limit the increased $5,162,000 under the school foundation program strictly for kindergarten use.

The Senate was still debating this proposal at noon and the bill had to be laid over when the Senate quit work until Monday.

The House received a bill to guarantee a minimum hourly wage of $1.25 except for farm workers, domestic help, executive and administrative positions, government employes, salesmen, educational and charitable workers and anyone under 18 years old.

It also tackled a bill to require payment of prevailing wages on all public works but opposition arose and the bill had to be laid over.

The Senate received a bill to allow dissemination of information about contraception and birth control. It was offered by Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Clayton.

One of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' major recommendations—to create a toll turnpike authority—won Senate committee approval Wednesday.

Snow Collapses Roof During Church Service

BALTIMORE, Md. AP -- The roof of a Roman Catholic church sagged under heavy snow and collapsed with a roar during Mass early today, injuring more than a score of persons.

The first department said 20 to 30 victims had been taken to hospitals from the St. Rose of Lima church.

There were an estimated 100 children and 20 adults in the church in the Brooklyn Park area of south Baltimore when the roof collapsed, firemen said. All were removed from the building.

One of the children, George Feely Jr., 7, a third-grader at St. Rose School next door, escaped out the back of the church.

He said he was about seven pews from the altar and heard something that "sounded like a door shutting."

"I saw something come down," he said. "It was the ceiling."

The roof collapsed following a snowfall of about 11 inches earlier this week.

The roof fell into the portion of the building housing the chapel, buckling and collapsing in the middle. The front and rear of the building remained upright.

Hahn Appeals Contest

The attorney for Harold Hahn in the contest of election of Aubrey Michael as county collector today filed an appeal with the circuit clerk's office in Benton to have the case heard by the Missouri Supreme Court.

The appeal is based on the grounds that the judge -- in ruling to dismiss the notice of contest of election -- did not follow the law.

Hahn's attorney said today, "Our sole position in the appeal is that the order issued by the judge was contrary to the law."

He said the case will be heard by the State Supreme Court either in the present session of the court, which ends in June, or will be in the next session, which opens in Octoober.

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig ruled in favor of Aubrey Michael in the contest of election filed for the office of Scott county collector of revenue by Harold Hahn Feb. 2.

Hahn came within 345 votes of winning the Nov. 8 election as a write - in candidate for the office of collector, according to the official count.

Hahn's attorney filed the first notice of election contest with Circuit Clerk Lynn Ingram on Nov. 17. A second amended notice containing allegations of voting fraud at 17 Scott county precincts was filed Dec. 22.

A hearing on the motions involved in the contest was held Jan. 26 in circuit court at Benton. Following the hearing, the judge took under advisement three motions including the motion to dismiss the second amended notice filed by Hahn.

Judge Craig listed eight reasons for his ruling to dismiss. Among the reasons, the judge said the notice of election contest failed to state sufficient grounds to warrant a recount.

Fire Burns Hay At M& M Grain

An unprotected electrical wire set fire to a stack of hay outside the M & M Grain Co., Highway 60 East in Miner, Wednesday afternoon. No damage to the building was caused.

Sikeston firemen were called at 2:11 p.m. and returned to the station at 2:35 p.m.

Hearnes Dedicates First 2 Regional Plan Commissions

WEST PLAINS (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes dedicated the first two Regional Planning Commissions in Missouri today, expressing the hope they could bridge the gap between social needs and technological advances.

He spoke first at West Plains, then flew to Poplar Bluff for a similar ceremony.

In a speech prepared for the West Plains meeting he said tremendous technological advances in the "soaring sixties" have placed a severe strain on the social structure.

"The conflicts and confusions we experience in our everyday relationships," he said, "are primarily occasioned by our inability to close the gap between learning and understanding, and the vast advances resulting from space-age research.

He told the South Central Ozark Regional Planning Commission its main concern will be to plan and develop a system of better roads, schools, parks, social and cultural activities.

But he warned that "planning is useless and can be a trial and tribulation to the people unless their personal welfare is considered as important in any final decisions."

The governor said "planning and people are the necessary common elements to achieve the desired result of a better tomorrow for this region."

Hearnes sounded a similar note in a ceremony two hours later at Poplar Bluff. He said both regions offer marvelous opportunities for development of human, natural and economic resources through sound planning.

He said the "society-technology gap" must be closed by sound local planning because it "even now raises a discordant note of alarm in our society and threatens to bring havoc and ruin" to social and economic progress.

"We cannot fail because we do not wish the federal government to fill the vacuum that we would create by our own inaction."

Jaycees to Search For Outstanding Teacher

The Junior Chamber of Commerce announced plans to select the outstanding young educator in Sikeston to spotlight achievement and dedication of professional educators between 21 and 35.

The contest was announced Wednesday afternoon at a meeting of the Sikeston Community Teachers Association in the high school cafetorium by James D. Sickal, chairman of the project.

"Our search is part of a nationwide Jaycee program," Sickal said.

The contest is open to both men and women teaching in grades 1 through 12.

Names for nomination may be submitted by anyone. Persons wishing to nominate a teacher are asked to send the name and school address to Sickal, Box 805, or call GR 1-1000.

A screening committee was selected by Glenn Jones, president of the teachers association, to help Sickal select final nominees. Persons named to the committee are: Harold Khiene, director of secondary education; Robert G. Miller, director of elementary education; Donald Fulton, principal of Lincoln school; Mrs. Annette French, Lee Hunter teacher; Mrs. James Beaird, junior high school teacher, and Mrs. Tony Statler, high school teacher.

Nominations will be judged by a panel of civic leaders. The winner will be honored at a special awards banquet and presented with a certificate and a $50 savings bond.

Winners from throughout the state will be eligible for a state competition, which will determine delegates to a national outstanding young educator program, Sickal said.

Violations of Lunar Truce Rated Minor

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) - The lunar new year truce eased through its second day today with neither side in the Vietnam war claiming a major violation. But U.S. and Vietnamese military authorities reported 114 incidents, and said 28 were considered significant.

Among the significant actions was a seven-hour fire fight between a company of the 173rd Airborne Brigade and an estimated 30 Viet Cong Wednesday in war Zone D north of Saigon. A U.S. spokesman said the American company of about 120 infantrymen suffered moderate casualties. Two Viet Cong were reported killed.

He said the Americans were moving to a new position and the guerrillas opened up from bunkers and trees. The Viet Cong used more than 100 hand grenades, rifle fire and a Claymore mine in the engagment, the spokesman said, while the Americans called in artillery and air strikes. The air attacks continued for four hours while the Americans removed their wounded, the spokesman reported.

The U.S. comapny was making a "positioning movement" and was not conducting an offensive operation, the spokesman said. He gave no further details.

With at least two more days to go in the cease-fire and all reports for the second day not yet in, the number of incidents was running slightly behind the total of 122 reported during the two-day truce at Christmas. But it was considerably below the 178 for the same cease-fire period over the New Year's weekend.

Vandals Paint Two Vehicles

Sikeston police received two reports Wednesday night from residents of Matthews street stating that vandals had thrown green paint on a car and a pickup truck.

The damaged car is owned by Carter Bell, 511 Matthews, and the pickup truck is owned by Dorma Angle, 414 Matthews, police said.

In other police activity, Dixie Stewart, route three, was charged by police Wednesday with careless and imprudent driving, police reported.

James Phillips Sr., 241 East Kathleen, was charged by police with allowing his dog to run unleashed.

Frank William, Poplar Bluff, was arrested by police Tuesday on East Malone and charged with intoxication, police said.

Precious Wade, Poplar Bluff, was arrested Tuesday on East Malone and charged with operating a vehicle with improper registration, exceeding the speed limit and driving without an operator's license, police reported.

Three motorists were charged by police Tuesday with running a stop sign on North West street: Larry Parks, 310 Virginia; Donald C. Lewis, 101 Salcedo road, and Patricia E. Barnes, Morehouse.

Powell Rapped for Refusal to Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a select House committee looking into Adam Clayton Powell's qualifications to be seated said today they think the Harlem Democrat has hurt his chances by refusing to answer some of its questions.

Powell, acting on the advice of his lawyers, cited constitutional objections Wednesday as he refused to discuss his New York legal difficulties and charges he misused government travel funds.

There was widespread feeling, both within and outside of the committee, that he had made it difficult for Democrats who want to find some way to seat him.

Some felt that his legal objections, essentially that the select committee should confine itself to the constitutional requirements of age, citizenship and inhabitancy in considering his qualifications, were intended mainly for use in a later court challenge to any unseating move.

"I think he made a mistake in not taking the opportunity to explain the allegations against him," said Rep. Charles M. Teague, R-Calif.

And a Democratic member, Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida, said "I regret that Mr. Powell didn't make a full response to all the questions. It would have afforded him a good opportunity to comment on some of the impressions people have gotten about his activities."

Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., asked about the probable effect of Powell's performance, said, "You will have to be the judge of that. But it certainly didn't help him."

Celler said the committee planned to call additional witnesses before it reports back to the House Feb. 23. The House set this deadline Jan. 10 when it voted 364 to 64 to have Powell stand aside until a select committee could determine his qualifications.

In rejecting Powell's contention that the probe should be confined to whether he possesses the constitutional requirements of being 25, a citizen for seven years and an inhabitant of the state which chooses him, Celler said the House gave the committee a "very broad" mandate.

"Without benefit of your testimony," Celler told him, "the committee will have to draw upon other sources." He said it "has no alternative but to draw whatever inferences may flow from whatever public record has been made."

These presumably would include the findings of a House administration subcommittee that Powell used official funds for private travel and had his wife on the payroll even though she lives in Puerto Rico. Also included could be four arrest orders for contempt of court now outstanding in New York as a result of a long unpaid court judgment.

Powell asked permission to make a statement to the committee, but Celler said Powell had lost his right to speak by refusing to answer questions.

"They broke their agreement," Powell told newsmen outside the hearing room. Then he delivered portions of his statement before television cameras, telling "my dear colleagues" that "Adam Clayton Powell is not on trial today, but the United States Constitution is."

Powell did not disclose his plans, but a New York lawyer who handles his business affairs, Seymour Barash, told reporters he is planning a nationwide speaking tour for Powell this spring.

The Harlem Democrat will be accompanied by a singing group from Bimini, the Bahamas, Barash said, adding that the purpose of the trip will be to pay off the rest of the New York court judgment and heavy legal fees in connection with it.

Rising Gas Prices Defy Usual Winter Pattern

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline price increases by major oil companies are spreading across the country.

The boosts of one cent a gallon at service stations are unseasonal and came in the wake of rising demand and higher labor costs.

Gulf Oil Co. Wednesday became the latest company to join the price rise parade. The advance affects all of the company's outlets except in the West Coast area.

Earlier, American Oil Co., Continental Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co., and Sunray Dx Oil Co. announced price boosts.

Gulf gave no reason for the increase, but a Gulf contract agreement last month set a general pattern for numerous new settlements between oil refiners and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union.

The general pattern included a 14-cent hourly pay hike immediately and a 4 per cent increase next January.

The wage levels were not immediately available.

Gasoline prices at this time of year normally go down instead of up. Wintry weather cuts driving and this leads to a buildup of inventories of motor fuel.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that gasoline stocks now are about 10 million barrels above inventories one year ago. But demand has been climbing. An industry source put consumption of gasoline at more than 4.6 million barrels daily, more than 4.5 per cent above a year ago.

The institute said service station prices for regular grade gasoline averaged 32½ cents a gallon last December.

Bureau of Public Roads figures show that there were 91.7 million motor vehicles registered in the United States at the end of 1965. Total motor vehicle fuel consumption for that year was 71.1 billion gallons, an average of 775 gallons per vehicle.

Of these vehicles, 76.6 million were passenger cars, which consumed 49.7 billion gallons of motor fuel, an average of 649 gallons per car.

Four Bridges To Improve Drainage

MEMPHIS -- Paul Montgomery, Inc., Poplar Bluff, was today awarded a $149,875 contract for constructing four county bridges across ditch 251 in New Madrid County, Mo.

In announcing the contract award, Col. James A. Vivian, Memphis district engineer, said that the bridge construction is in connection with the enlargement of the ditch to improve Little River drainage under the St. Francis Basin project.

The four bridges will be located between Lone Star and the junction of ditch 251 with Otter slough, north of Lilbourn.

Work will commence in 30 days and be completed in 12 months, Colonel Vivian said.

Restaurant Fire Cause Remains Undetermined

MONTGOMERY, ALA. (AP) - Fire Department officials continued their search today for the cause of a flash fire which swept through a plush penthouse restaurant Tuesday night claiming 25 lives.

Funeral services for some of the victims were held today with others scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Fire Chief W. T. Mallory said his men were still interviewing witnesses in an effort to determine the cause of the blaze at Dale's Penthouse.

Victims of the worst fire in Montgomery's history included a former member of the State Public Service Commission, Ed Pepper, and a top official of the International Teamsters Union, Sidney Zagri of Washington.

The wife of the Montgomery Advertiser's sports editor, Jack Doane, died in the flames which swept the restaurant where she was a hostess.

Employes of the fashionable dining spot, and diners who were able to escape, said the fire started in a cloakroom and spread out of control before it could be extinguished.

There was no immediate explanation for the speed with which the flames enveloped the penthouse.

Some diners and employes escaped before the elevators failed and others managed to reach the roof through windows. Firemen led them to safety after the flames were controlled.

The restaurant is located atop the 10-story Walter Bragg Smith apartment hotel in downtown Montgomery.

John English, a part owner of the restaurant, estimated the damage at about $135,000.

Taylor Rates Peace Conditions Improved

LAS CRUCES, N. M. AP -- Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former U. S. ambassador to South Vietnam, says conditions for a negotiated peace in Vietnam have become more favorable.

But Taylor told an audience Wednesday night at New Mexico State University that "as far as he knew," there had been no tangible evidence of progress toward negotiations. He said that if North Vietnam should put out a peace feeler, it would be done so quietly and carefully that "you and I won't know anything about it."

Speaking before 1,500 persons, Taylor said that Hanoi, Peking and Moscow have started a propaganda campaign "to convince the U. S. that a halt to bombing of North Vietnam is the only chance for peace."

Taylor speaks tonight at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, where a group of students began a "peace vigil" Wednesday night. About 30 students were in the university's concert hall, where Taylor was to speak, reading, playing a phonograph and fasting.

They said they would stay until after Taylor's speech.

Dexter Soldier Killed

DEXTER AP -- The parents of a Dexter soldier said today they had been notified by the Defense Department that their son had been killed in action in South Vietnam.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sisler said they had a telegram that their son, Lt. Kenneth Sisler, 29, was killed Jan. 7 by small arms fire near Da Nang.

Sisler also is survived by his wife, Jane, and two small children, all of Dexter.

Quake Hits Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - A severe earthquake hit Colombia today and first accounts indicated at least 25 were dead and many injured.

The quake was felt throughout the nation, and especially in the cities of Bogota, Calif., Pereira, Medellin, Bucaramanga and Cucuta. Neighboring Venezuela also was shaken.

Panic was widespread in Colombia. Phones and other communications failed in many areas.

The quake was recorded at 10:27 a.m. EST, in both Colombia and Venezuela.

International communications out of Bogota were cut off for more than an hour after the quake hit.

Thousands fled into the streets of Bogota, the capital.

The quake in Venezuela was lighter, judging from first reports.

In Washington, scientists of the Coast and Geodetic Survey's national earthquake information center said the quake's magnitude was between 6 3/4 and 7. This would mean it was "potentially damaging" to any buildings in the immediate area, they said.

Thompson Gets Change Of Venue

BENTON -- Tommy Lee Thompson, 18, Sikeston, charged with burglary and stealing, was granted a change of venue to Stoddard county today in circuit court at Benton.

The attorney for Thompson had filed for a change of venue both from the judge and from the people.

Thompson is charged in connection with the Feb. 17, 1965, burglary of the Daris Burgess residence, 842 Ruth in Sikeston.

Thompson was acquitted of a first degree murder charge Dec. 9, 1966, in circuit court at Jackson in connection with the Feb. 1, 1965, slaying of Mrs. W. R. Lewis, Sikeston.

Death Toll May Reach 100 in Tasmanian Fire

HOBART, Tasmania (AP) - The death toll in Tasmania's disastrous bush and forest fires could reach at least 100, a senior police officer said today as flames roared out of the bush again to threaten more towns.

Police, firemen and 50 prisoners released from Hobart's jail were rushed to the orchard country at Huonville, 20 miles south of the island state's capital, where a northwest wind was pushing the fire toward houses.

Fifty more prisoners were trucked to the Bagdad area, 30 miles north of Hobart, where another blaze threatened to break from the bushland.

The confirmed toll so far was 49 dead, hundreds hurt and 3,500 homeless. The senior police officer said it might take a week to get an accurate count of the dead.

Eight towns were reported wiped out. Among 700 buildings destroyed were 650 houses. The others included hotels, schools, offices and factories.

Tens of thousands of apples, the Huon Valley's main crop, were ruined in the more than 10,000 acres burned over. The Derwent Valley, Tasmania's hop-growing center, had 500 persons without food or shelter.

Hundreds of head of livestock were killed. Thousands of workers and children were idle because factories and schools were razed. Smoke rose 10,000 feet over Hobart.

Workers struggled through the night to restore power, water and communications to outlying townships.

Hearnes Calls for New Government Concept

POPLAR BLUFF (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes called today for a "new philosophy of limited government close to the people to guarantee the future of our democratic system."

Hearnes, a Democrat from Southeastern Missouri, has been a frequent critic of Johnson Administration policies and the growth of centralized government.

In a speech prepared for a joint service club luncheon, he renewed his appeal for "block grants" - a return of some federal revenue to the states.

If Congress does not approve such a proposal, he suggested that the states resort to the initiative method of calling a Constitutional Convention to propose a constitutional amendment authorizing Congress to return a part of the federal income tax to the states.

He said the people "can accept the central government theory as being the panacea of all our community ills" or "we here in Missouri-who believe in the theory of limited government close to and the servant of the people-can lead the nation in achieving the coveted goal."

States must re-examine their role, he said, in developing strong and stable local government.

"Legislation is necessary to strengthen the powers of local government and to encourage cooperative approaches to common problems. The regional concept-for instance-is an excellent vehicle for common problem solving and a worthy substitute for our present proliferation of government units."

The governor earlier today dedicated Missouri's first two Regional Planning Commissions at West Plains in the south central Ozarks and at Poplar Bluff

He urged the civic club members to recruit others to the cause of limited government close to the people."

"There are problems of financing government in a way that is fair and equitable to all without stifling growth of our economic system," he said.

"There are social problems connected with the aged, the youth and the poor. There are problems of providing a better education for more and more people. There are the moral problems of maintaining a society with a proper sense of values.

"There is the paramount problem . . . to review and redefine the role of government at the federal, state and local level."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:

TIPS ON HOW TO KNOCK YOUR TOWN

While scanning through the various newspapers the Standard exchanges with, one of the Minnesota papers had an editorial explaining how to be a successful knocker of your own community.

Of course, none of our area citizens would fall into this category but you might be interested in the problems other communities face.

Here it is:

TEN WAYS TO RUIN YOUR TOWN

1. Attend no meeting of any kind. Criticize the way "they" are doing things.

2. Remind others at all times of the cold winters and hot summers - and the ruggedness required for those who live here.

3. Complain about the police department, fire department, Chamber of Commerce, and all other governmental and civic groups.

4. Keep convincing yourself that your attention at school programs, service clubs, concerts, ball games, exhibits and benefit programs is not important - you'll never be missed.

5. Knock your city council or county commissioners - and be sure you never attend while they are in session.

6. Stay away from church. You might attend on Easter or during the Christmas season just to reassure yourself that all who attend are hypocrites.

7. Purchase most of your requirements through "discount" catalogs. These firms are the first to come forth with donations and service to your community.

8. Remind others that your local newspaper is no good - it misses more local news than the out-of-town papers get by accident.

9. Remember that all kids are delinquents. All businessmen are crooks, and that uncomplimentary remarks about the town are the order of the day.

10. Above all, always be skeptical, cynical and negative about anything that is designed for the community's progress and betterment. Your motto should be: "If it's good, it can't happen here."

POSTAL PROBLEMS

The first general postage rate increase since 1962 appears almost certain to be approved by Congress this year. As outlined by President Johnson in his State of the Union message, the proposed increase would produce around $700 million a year in additional revenue in fiscal 1968. Yet even that sum would not eliminate the Post Office deficit, which will reach $1.2 billion in the current fiscal year.

The problems of the Post Office are familiar ones: Sharply rising costs, slowly rising revenue, mounting mail volume, and sometimes erratic service. Each of these problems is greater today than ever before. Mail volume, for example, originally was estimated at 77.7 billion pieces for fiscal 1967. But it probably will climb to 80 billion pieces.

Although the flood of mail sets records every year, the Post Office Department has been slow to adopt new methods of coping with it. The powerful postal unions look with suspicion on efforts to introduce mail-handling machinery. Most of the country's post offices suffer from such handicaps as inadequate space, poor location, or inexperienced personnel. In these circumstances, postal officials assert, it is a wonder that mail delivery is as good as it is.

Public attitudes toward postal service and postal finances are often confused by the fact that, unlike most government agencies, the Post Office is both a public service and a big business operation. Perhaps no single institution renders direct personal service to more individuals. On this basis, it can be argued that so nearly universal a service should be financed, at least in part, from general tax revenues.

On the other hand, the volume of revenue received by the Post Office in direct payment for services rendered (about $4.6 billion in 1966) places it in the class of big business. The postal service now employs about 700,000 persons, or about the number employed by General Motors. Contracts of the Post Office with railroads, airlines, steamship and truck companies involve outlays that will total $605 million in the current fiscal year.

For most of its history, the U.S. Post Office has been operated as a public service. Postal expenditure exceeded postal revenue by $40 in the very first year of the Republic, 1789. From 1790 to 1837, the Post Office recorded small surpluses in every year except one. A decade of deficits followed, relieved only briefly by four surplus years beginning in 1848. During the past 116 years, there has been a deficit in all except 13 years. Most of the surpluses have been shown in time of war, when there always has been a great increase in the amount of revenue-producing first class mail handled by the Post Office.

Multiplication of Post Office activities over the years has had a direct bearing on postal deficits. Of all the special services added during the last century, only the postal savings system - no longer in existence - operated without a loss. The deficits have been enlarged by various services provided without charge, or at less than cost, as a matter of public policy.

Among the various classes of mail, first class and air mail, which together account for almost 60 per cent of all mail by volume, earn a small profit for the Post Office. Third class mail, which includes advertising circulars or "junk mail," pays for only 60 per cent of costs. Second class mail - mostly magazines - pays for only 30 per cent.

The proposed postage rate increase would not change matters. President Johnson wants to raise the first class rate from 5¢ to 6¢ an ounce, and the air mail rate from 8¢ to 9¢ an ounce. Increases sought for second and third class mail may amount to 20 to 30 per cent - hardly enough to make those categories self-supporting.

The Post Office is in the difficult position of attempting to provide efficient service with antiquated plant and equipment and a lack of operating flexibility. Although some modifications have been made, the country's present network of post offices is essentially the same as that of a quarter-century ago. In the meantime, transportation patterns have changed and population has been growing and shifting.

Altogether, the Post Office has found it harder than ever before to live up to the famous slogan on the facade of its New York City headquarters: "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

REDUCING THE RISK OF HEART ATTACK

If the fabled Aladdin could appear with his magic lamp, offering to substantially improve your chances to avoid or delay a heart attack, he would get a lot of local business. And if his magic lamp really proved effective, he would surely be hailed as one of the greatest benefactors of all time.

Fortunately, Aladdin's services are not needed. What's needed is for you and your family to follow these six simple rules listed by your Heart Association:

1. Control high blood pressure. New drugs and treatment can lessen the risks of heart attack and stroke.

2. Don't smoke cigarettes. They increase the risk of heart attack. Help your family avoid the habit.

3. Watch your diet. Eat foods lower in saturated fat and cholesterol. Help your children form good diet habits.

4. Keep weight normal. Extra pounds increase the risk of high blood pressure and heart attack.

5. Keep physically fit. Regular exercise improves circulation and strengthens the heart.

6. See your doctors regularly. Let him advise what's best for every member of your family.

Your Heart Association emphasizes that no guarantees can be offered. But it also points out that almost any individual, through adherence to the six rules, can surely improve his chances for a longer and happier life.

We would like to add a seventh suggestion: Support the 1967 Heart Fund Campaign, being conducted here throughout February. Give - So More Will Live!

THE NEED FOR RESTRAINT

The government's "noninflationary" guideline for wage increases has been set at 3.2 per cent a year.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little ordeals is having to cope with overly neat people.

You know the kind I mean:

If you give them a pigeon, they already have a pigeonhole waiting to put it into.

If you invite them into your home, the first thing they do is surreptitiously wipe their fingers on your cocktail table to see if your wife has dusted it lately.

If the first robin of spring alights outside their window, they shoo it away for fear it will ruin the perfection of their lawn by digging for worms.

Life for the overly neat person is a package deal, neatly wrapped and tied. His motto is, "A place for everything, and everything in its place."

This philosophy has a nice, high sounding ring to it - but the ring is hollow. If there is a place for everything, and everything is in its place, you've got a static universe and a dead world. It is a perfect description of a cemetery.

The trouble with neat people is that they aren't satisfied with merely having all their own things in their proper places. They feel a divine mission to come over to your place and put everything there in its right place. They demand that you be like them.

And there is only one defense possible for an untidy person when one of these unctuous reformers tries to mold your life into his own pallid, polished pattern. Look him squarely in the eye — and then spit in it.

The trouble with the overly neat person is that, basically, he was born into the wrong world. He hates surprise and change. He would like always to be carrying an umbrella when it rains and be wearing overshoes when it snows. Year-round, if he had his way, the sun would come up at the same time every morning and set at the same time every evening.

Unfortunately, the world isn't like that. The world is a lovely wilderness of welter and wonder, full of blind alleys and tremendous vistas, of flowers and thorns and bears and butterflies, of wasps and hidden honey, of poisonous plants and helpful herbs, of stinging thistles and ripening fruit.

Nature isn't at all overly neat. In nature everything - even the rocks that crack in winter —is in movement, trying to go from one place to another. Even the celestial spheres vary in their orbits. They hate too much order, too.

As a chronically untidy man myself, I hope that heaven for me will turn out to be as disorderly as the desk I keep. I hope it will turn out to be a junkpile a million miles wide and ten thousand miles high, where I can spend eternity cheerfully pawing through the debris in search of souvenirs.

That, of course, would be a hell to the overly tidy person. He aspires to a heaven that, like his life, is as planned as a cell-block.

Life does need some planning. But a life too planned can become an unplanned death.

Just how accurate such a guideline can be is a matter of conjecture. But most economists think that the existing one is far better than nothing. And most of them are concerned by the fact that numbers of recent wage settlements have exceeded the 3.2 per cent level.

And that, it seems, may only be the start. National labor leaders have said that they have no intention of following the guideline. Whatever one may think of their arguments, this policy, if successful, cannot help but be strongly inflationary. And if a major wave of inflation really takes hold, all of us will be in for deep trouble.

For example, a spokesman for the Associated General Contractors has said that government controls are likely unless the Building Trades Unions lower their wage sights. This would mean more bureaucratic domination, by fiat, of the affairs of both labor and management. And both would be the losers.

What is urgently, even desperately, needed now, is restraint -- restraint on the part of business and labor and, of peak importance, the big spenders in the government.

The teenagers thought about that for several moments, then a cool cat standing on the curb announced, "I get it, man -0 rhythm and blues!"

UNHANDY ANDY

Reading James Thurber's sketch about his father in The Thurber Album hits a responsive cord with me. All my life I have been an unhandy Andy. I admire those who are clever in doing things with their hands, but this is not for me. As a boy I flunked a course in manual training and I haven't improved since.

I know what the senior Thurber was up against. I belong to his club. James Thurber says this of his father: "He was plagued by the mechanical . . . Knobs froze at his touch, doors stuck, lines fouled, the detachable would not detach, the adjustable would not adjust. He could rarely get the top off anything, and he was forever trying to unlock something with the key to something else. In 1908, trying to fix the snap lock to the door of his sons' rabbit pen, he succeeded only after getting inside the cage, where he was imprisoned for three hours with six Belgian hares and thirteen guinea pigs."

AN UNLIMITED FUTURE

What does a major timber company produce?

Most people, asked that question, will come up with an obvious answer: Lumber.

But nowadays, so versatile is wood when transformed by the arts of chemistry, that it is only a part of the answer - and the smaller part.

One of this country's leading timber companies says that, while it is producing more lumber than ever, other products account for nearly 75 per cent of its business. The list of wood products literally numbers thousands, and it is constantly growing.

Silvichemicals is the name given to products which have their beginnings in such wood wastes as sawdust, bark and chips. It is reported that something like 2,600 of these chemicals have so far been separated from the wastes, and have an annual market value of $260 million. They range an astonishing gamut, and play a role in the production of innumerable products -- including such totally diverse commodities as food and fuel. And their role in the economic life of the nation, the researchers are convinced, is destined to vastly expand.

This means, obviously, a huge and ever - increasing demand for wood. That demand will be satisfied-- thanks to tree farming which sees to it that the new growth equals or exceeds the cut. More than 66 million acres in 48 of the 50 states are now managed by their owners as tree farms. Timber, in all its myriad manifestations, faces an unlimited future.

H.L. Hunt Says

A SOLID FRONT FOR FREEDOM

Our Republican form of government is under constant attack from the enemies of freedom. It is a form of government that stimulates individualism and independence among its citizens. These are two ingredients our enemies cannot tolerate; but they are also sources of weakness to those of us who prize them most.

Enemies of freedom regiment readily. Individualists are not apt to coordinate and are prone not to cooperate. If freedomists do not "hang together" they will most assuredly hang separately.

Those who love freedom can defend the Republic best by standing together, commending each other and presenting a solid front for freedom. Tney should patronize advertisers who demonstrate their own predisposition to freedom by utilizing the talents and services of newscasters, entertainers, writers, speakers and media that are slanted for, not against, liberty.

It is enlightening to list those that come to mind under each of these categories, and it is heartwarming to know how many notable people, periodicals and patriotic groups are actively pro-freedomist. Compile your own list of good examples, submitting it to others. Encourage them to do likewise. Encourage advertisers, by buying their products, telling others about them and commending them by letter.

Ingenious Communist propaganda admonishes businessmen to soothe the socialist and cooperate with the Communist or lose customers. It disdains patriots, charging "guilt by association." Freedomists must ignore this as nonsense and not fear being classified with others who are important, liberty-loving, Americans.

The menace of Communism is on the march. In 22 years they have extended the slavish tentacles of Communist rule over one billion people. Their prime objective, if we will believe them, is to wrap these tentacles around the USA. Ours must be to assure that they don't. To prevent it requires a joint effort. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

On January 29, Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson reported a unique situation at Huntsville, Ala., in which the Southern Iron and Equipment Company had offered to save the Pentagon $32,000 by turning back to the defense department for only $200 some junked tooling which the department was reordering elsewhere.

Immediately after publication of this column, the defense department telephoned Southern Iron and Equipment saying they would like to discuss the acquiring of the $32,000 worth of tooling which the company had previously offered for only the original junk price of $200.

WASHINGTON -- It's unusual that around 400 top business leaders can come to Washington for a conference with the President and the Secretary of State and not make headlines. But that's what happened last week.

Some of the most important business executives in the nation, from Los Angeles, New York, Chicago and San Francisco, arrived at the invitation of Secretary Rusk to discuss the Johnson proposal to promote trade with the European Communist nations. Ratification of the USA-USSR consular treaty is part of this over - all policy.

President Johnson greeted business leaders at a cocktail party reception in the Madison room on the top floor of the state department.

"My father told me never to make speeches at rodeos, country dances or cocktail parties," he said. "Despite that, I want to give you the philisophy behind my idea of improving relations between the United States and the Soviet Union."

The President then talked quite simply, but obviously from the heart, regarding his idea that if "the two big boys," as he expressed it, pull together there will be no more war. He emphasized the fact that only the United States and Russia have refined atomic weapons, and that the world has reached a point where these weapons could spread to irresponsible governments; so steps must be taken to stop this spread. He considered the treaty for the non - proliferation of nuclear weapons, now almost concluded, to be an important step in this direction.

CRACKING J. EDGAR HOOVER

He enumerated the steps he had taken to improve relations with the European Communist world, his hope to get Russian cooperation for peace in Vietnam, and in saving the expense of a cutthroat extravagant race to build anti-missile systems.

Indirectly he took a crack at his friend J. Edgar Hoover, whom he has continued as FBI Director three times beyond the statutory retirement age of 70, yet who has been undermining the President's Russian - American consular treaty.

Johnson scoffed at the idea that the treaty would permit more Soviet spies in the United States. The United States will get the same number of consulates in the USSR as Russia got in the USA, he said, and emphasized that American travelers would get better protection through these consulates.

"With 2,500 Soviets in this country," the President said, "I don't see who 25 or 30 more can be very dangerous."

Lady Bird was also at the reception and was introduced by Vice President Humphrey.

RUSK'S BRIEFING

Earlier, in the state department auditorium, Secretary Rusk briefed the business leaders off the record on the importance of promoting East-West trade.

There is nothing inconsistent, he said, about President Johnson's war against Communist forces in Vietnam and friendly overtures to Communist nations in Europe. The best way to end the Vietnam war, Rusk contended, was to improve relations with the Soviet bloc. Hanoi, he explained, is caught between Peking's militant anti - western policy and Moscow's peaceful coexistence policy. East - West trade, therefore, will demonstrate that Moscow is right, and perhaps persuade Hanoi to follow the same coexistence path.

The more Communist nations that can be attracted by trade to follow the coexistence line, Rusk argued, the more impressed North Vietnam will be.

Rusk said he wasn't concerned about building up a huge volume of trade; all he hopes to do is soften the rigid U.S. attitude against doing business behind the onetime Iron Curtain. Tariffs on Communist goods entering this country are two or three times higher than on non - Communist goods, and Rusk said removing these barriers would have a psychological effect on the Communist world and shorten the war.

Several other state department officials also briefed the business leaders about the importance of cooperation between the world's two giant nations. The only official who seemed slightly out of step was Dr. Eugene Rostow, former dean of the Yale Law School. He brought in the old theme about Communist aggression.

Note -- Last year, after Firestone Rubber had signed an agreement with Romania to build a tire plant there, it was scared off by the Young Americans for Freedom, a right-wing Republican organization, which had been working with a Firestone competitor, Goodyear. Last month, the Young Americans for Freedom announced jubilantly that they had scared American Motors away from its plan to sell Ramblers in Russia.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Walter Reuther Maneuvering Into Position To Launch Drive For "Union of the Poor"

Washington, D.C. -- Rusty-haired Walter Reuther, who has just unleashed his own cultural revolution inside labor, now is playing for big stakes -- a third militant, surging union federation built around his massive Auto Workers organization and a Hoffa-less, equally gargantuan teamsters brotherhood.

That's the consensus in labor's high command which he has been needing for months with rapier-like charges of hardening of their organizational arteries.

Thus, with a new force of some 3.2 million strategically placed followers, Reuther, the incomparable of the 1930s, leader of sitdowns, dynamo of the old CIO, would be free to unleash the mass movement of which he and his younger brother, Victor, have always dreamed.

Unfettered from strong ties with the venerable AFL-CIO, freed from disciplinary necessities of following the leadership of the 72-year-old veteran labor chief George Meany, and finally in a position to ignore directives and policies of the old giant AFL-CIO itself, Walter Reuther will begin a long planned drive for the unionization of millions of poor.

WIDER GOALS -- He will parallel this with new thrusts into the fields of white collar and professional employes such as teachers, nurses and employes of the federal government, where his goal in Washington, D.C., alone is 800,000 members.

Of course this would mean that he has to pull out of the 13.5 million member AFL-CIO. He could slip out of the huge labor network as easily as Houdini did out of a straitjacket. This could be done with a short, simple resolution at the United Auto Workers convention which its executive board has scheduled for April 20. They could just vote to disaffiliate.

Then, the Reuthers, with Jimmy Hoffa hitting the last mile to the Atlanta Penitentiary, could make their pitch for some sort of fraternal arrangement with the neighboring International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Both unions have their national headquarters in Detroit.

There has always been an off-the-record liaison with UAW and the teamsters. There need not necessarily be any form of affiliation at first. This could come later as Hoffa's influence diminishes.

But, the two giant unions would work closely all over the United States.

Such a coalition would make it quite easy for Reuther and his special aides inside the AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department -- an organization of some six million members with a treasury of $3 million -- to move into thousands of "communities of the poor."

Already one of Reuther's veteran organizers, Brendon Sexton, is directing a network stretching from Sleepy Hollows in Kentucky to the congested, teeming ghetto districts such as Watts, West Chicago, and Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant in New York City.

NEED NOT WAIT -- Reuther estimates that there are some 35 million working poor and they could be organized into some 10,000 units in loosely formed quasi-unions. Except for the fact that the workers' alliance of the 1930s was composed of unemployed, Reuther's contemplated network of the 1960s would parallel the alliance and people it with those he calls "the working poor." It could become a mighty force.

All this need not wait until he formally pulls out of the AFL-CIO -- if he ever does, which is by no means certain despite his resignation from the vice presidency. He simply could push ahead with his own organizational objectives, despite the fact that he has resigned as chairman of the AFL-CIO's standing committee on organization and economic policy.

Meanwhile he will continue to marshall a war of nerves against the AFL-CIO hierarchy which he claims, in his kindest moments, has become archaic and stuck in the plush of its own special society.

For the moment he is expected to find mighty little support inside the AFL-CIO. However there are a few leaders who might go along with him. But no one of consequence. Which is why he is expected to turn to that other giant, the Teamsters.

Together they could give the elders of today's labor movement a long run for their money and membership.

6. Stay away from church. You might attend on Easter or during the Christmas season just to reassure yourself that all who attend are hypocrites.

7. Purchase most of your requirements through "discount" catalogs. These firms are the first to come forth with donations and service to your community.

8. Remind others that your local newspaper is no good - it misses more local news than the out-of-town papers get by accident.

9. Remember that all kids are delinquents. All businessmen are crooks, and that uncomplimentary remarks about the town are the order of the day.

10. Above all, always be skeptical, cynical and negative about anything that is designed for the community's progress and betterment. Your motto should be: "If it's good, it can't happen here."

POSTAL PROBLEMS

The first general postage rate increase since 1962 appears almost certain to be approved by Congress this year. As outlined by President Johnson in his State of the Union message, the proposed increase would produce around $700 million a year in additional revenue in fiscal 1968. Yet even that sum would not eliminate the Post Office deficit, which will reach $1.2 billion in the current fiscal year.

The problems of the Post Office are familiar ones: Sharply rising costs, slowly rising revenue, mounting mail volume, and sometimes erratic service. Each of these problems is greater today than ever before. Mail volume, for example, originally was estimated at 77.7 billion pieces for fiscal 1967. But it probably will climb to 80 billion pieces.

Although the flood of mail sets records every year, the Post Office Department has been slow to adopt new methods of coping with it. The powerful postal unions look with suspicion on efforts to introduce mail-handling machinery. Most of the country's post offices suffer from such handicaps as inadequate space, poor location, or inexperienced personnel. In these circumstances, postal officials assert, it is a wonder that mail delivery is as good as it is.

Public attitudes toward postal service and postal finances are often confused by the fact that, unlike most government agencies, the Post Office is both a public service and a big business operation. Perhaps no single institution renders direct personal service to more individuals. On this basis, it can be argued that so nearly universal a service should be financed, at least in part, from general tax revenues.

On the other hand, the volume of revenue received by the Post Office in direct payment for services rendered (about $4.6 billion in 1966) places it in the class of big business. The postal service now employs about 700,000 persons, or about the number employed by General Motors. Contracts of the Post Office with railroads, airlines, steamship and truck companies involve outlays that will total $605 million in the current fiscal year.

For most of its history, the U.S. Post Office has been operated as a public service. Postal expenditure exceeded postal revenue by $40 in the very first year of the Republic, 1789. From 1790 to 1837, the Post Office recorded small surpluses in every year except one. A decade of deficits followed, relieved only briefly by four surplus years beginning in 1848. During the past 116 years, there has been a deficit in all except 13 years. Most of the surpluses have been shown in time of war, when there always has been a great increase in the amount of revenue-producing first class mail handled by the Post Office.

Multiplication of Post Office activities over the years has had a direct bearing on postal deficits. Of all the special services added during the last century, only the postal savings system - no longer in existence - operated without a loss. The deficits have been enlarged by various services provided without charge, or at less than cost, as a matter of public policy.

Among the various classes of mail, first class and air mail, which together account for almost 60 per cent of all mail by volume, earn a small profit for the Post Office. Third class mail, which includes advertising circulars or "junk mail," pays for only 60 per cent of costs. Second class mail - mostly magazines - pays for only 30 per cent.

The proposed postage rate increase would not change matters. President Johnson wants to raise the first class rate from 5¢ to 6¢ an ounce, and the air mail rate from 8¢ to 9¢ an ounce. Increases sought for second and third class mail may amount to 20 to 30 per cent - hardly enough to make those categories self-supporting.

The Post Office is in the difficult position of attempting to provide efficient service with antiquated plant and equipment and a lack of operating flexibility. Although some modifications have been made, the country's present network of post offices is essentially the same as that of a quarter-century ago. In the meantime, transportation patterns have changed and population has been growing and shifting.

Altogether, the Post Office has found it harder than ever before to live up to the famous slogan on the facade of its New York City headquarters: "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

REDUCING THE RISK OF HEART ATTACK

If the fabled Aladdin could appear with his magic lamp, offering to substantially improve your chances to avoid or delay a heart attack, he would get a lot of local business. And if his magic lamp really proved effective, he would surely be hailed as one of the greatest benefactors of all time.

Fortunately, Aladdin's services are not needed. What's needed is for you and your family to follow these six simple rules listed by your Heart Association:

1. Control high blood pressure. New drugs and treatment can lessen the risks of heart attack and stroke.

2. Don't smoke cigarettes. They increase the risk of heart attack. Help your family avoid the habit.

3. Watch your diet. Eat foods lower in saturated fat and cholesterol. Help your children form good diet habits.

4. Keep weight normal. Extra pounds increase the risk of high blood pressure and heart attack.

5. Keep physically fit. Regular exercise improves circulation and strengthens the heart.

6. See your doctors regularly. Let him advise what's best for every member of your family.

Your Heart Association emphasizes that no guarantees can be offered. But it also points out that almost any individual, through adherence to the six rules, can surely improve his chances for a longer and happier life.

We would like to add a seventh suggestion: Support the 1967 Heart Fund Campaign, being conducted here throughout February. Give - So More Will Live!

CARRIER PIGEON OLYMPICS. Feb. 10-12. Vienna, Austria.

THE NEED FOR RESTRAINT

The government's "noninflationary" guideline for wage increases has been set at 3.2 per cent a year.

Just how accurate such a guideline can be is a matter of conjecture. But most economists think that the existing one is far better than nothing. And most of them are concerned by the fact that numbers of recent wage settlements have exceeded the 3.2 per cent level.

And that, it seems, may only be the start. National labor leaders have said that they have no intention of following the guideline. Whatever one may think of their arguments, this policy, if successful, cannot help but be strongly inflationary. And if a major wave of inflation really takes hold, all of us will be in for deep trouble.

For example, a spokesman for the Associated General Contractors has said that government controls are likely unless the Building Trades Unions lower their wage sights. This would mean more bureaucratic domination, by fiat, of the affairs of both labor and management. And both would be the losers.

What is urgently, even desperately, needed now, is restraint -- restraint on the part of business and labor and, of peak importance, the big spenders in the government.

"Stop working yourself up," the farmer told him. "You're too old for that kind of stuff."

"Maybe I am," answered the bull, "but at least I can show him I'm not a cow, can't I?"

UNHANDY ANDY

Reading James Thurber's sketch about his father in The Thurber Album hits a responsive cord with me. All my life I have been an unhandy Andy. I admire those who are clever in doing things with their hands, but this is not for me. As a boy I flunked a course in manual training and I haven't improved since.

I know what the senior Thurber was up against. I belong to his club. James Thurber says this of his father: "He was plagued by the mechanical . . . Knobs froze at his touch, doors stuck, lines fouled, the detachable would not detach, the adjustable would not adjust. He could rarely get the top off anything, and he was forever trying to unlock something with the key to something else. In 1908, trying to fix the snap lock to the door of his sons' rabbit pen, he succeeded only after getting inside the cage, where he was imprisoned for three hours with six Belgian hares and thirteen guinea pigs."

AN UNLIMITED FUTURE

What does a major timber company produce?

Most people, asked that question, will come up with an obvious answer: Lumber.

But nowadays, so versatile is wood when transformed by the arts of chemistry, that it is only a part of the answer - and the smaller part.

One of this country's leading timber companies says that, while it is producing more lumber than ever, other products account for nearly 75 per cent of its business. The list of wood products literally numbers thousands, and it is constantly growing.

Silvichemicals is the name given to products which have their beginnings in such wood wastes as sawdust, bark and chips. It is reported that something like 2,600 of these chemicals have so far been separated from the wastes, and have an annual market value of $260 million. They range an astonishing gamut, and play a role in the production of innumerable products -- including such totally diverse commodities as food and fuel. And their role in the economic life of the nation, the researchers are convinced, is destined to vastly expand.

This means, obviously, a huge and ever - increasing demand for wood. That demand will be satisfied-- thanks to tree farming which sees to it that the new growth equals or exceeds the cut. More than 66 million acres in 48 of the 50 states are now managed by their owners as tree farms. Timber, in all its myriad manifestations, faces an unlimited future.

H.L. Hunt Says

A SOLID FRONT FOR FREEDOM

Our Republican form of government is under constant attack from the enemies of freedom. It is a form of government that stimulates individualism and independence among its citizens. These are two ingredients our enemies cannot tolerate; but they are also sources of weakness to those of us who prize them most.

Enemies of freedom regiment readily. Individualists are not apt to coordinate and are prone not to cooperate. If freedomists do not "hang together" they will most assuredly hang separately.

Those who love freedom can defend the Republic best by standing together, commending each other and presenting a solid front for freedom. They should patronize advertisers who demonstrate their own predisposition to freedom by utilizing the talents and services of newscasters, entertainers, writers, speakers and media that are slanted for, not against, liberty.

It is enlightening to list those that come to mind under each of these categories, and it is heartwarming to know how many notable people, periodicals and patriotic groups are actively pro-freedomist. Compile your own list of good examples, submitting it to others. Encourage them to do likewise. Encourage advertisers, by buying their products, telling others about them and commending them by letter.

Ingenious Communist propaganda admonishes businessmen to soothe the socialist and cooperate with the Communist or lose customers. It disdains patriots, charging "guilt by association." Freedomists must ignore this as nonsense and not fear being classified with others who are important, liberty-loving, Americans.

The menace of Communism is on the march. In 22 years they have extended the slavish tentacles of Communist rule over one billion people. Their prime objective, if we will believe them, is to wrap these tentacles around the USA. Ours must be to assure that they don't. To prevent it requires a joint effort. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

On January 29, Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson reported a unique situation at Huntsville, Ala., in which the Southern Iron and Equipment Company had offered to save the Pentagon $32,000 by turning back to the defense department for only $200 some junked tooling which the department was reordering elsewhere.

Immediately after publication of this column, the defense department telephoned Southern Iron and Equipment saying they would like to discuss the acquiring of the $32,000 worth of tooling which the company had previously offered for only the original junk price of $200.

WASHINGTON -- It's unusual that around 400 top business leaders can come to Washington for a conference with the President and the Secretary of State and not make headlines. But that's what happened last week.

Some of the most important business executives in the nation, from Los Angeles, New York, Chicago and San Francisco, arrived at the invitation of Secretary Rusk to discuss the Johnson proposal to promote trade with the European Communist nations. Ratification of the USA-USSR consular treaty is part of this over - all policy.

President Johnson greeted business leaders at a cocktail party reception in the Madison room on the top floor of the state department.

"My father told me never to make speeches at rodeos, country dances or cocktail parties," he said. "Despite that, I want to give you the philisophy behind my idea of improving relations between the United States and the Soviet Union."

The President then talked quite simply, but obviously from the heart, regarding his idea that if "the two big boys," as he expressed it, pull together there will be no more war. He emphasized the fact that only the United States and Russia have refined atomic weapons, and that the world has reached a point where these weapons could spread to irresponsible governments; so steps must be taken to stop this spread. He considered the treaty for the non - proliferation of nuclear weapons, now almost concluded, to be an important step in this direction.

CRACKING J. EDGAR HOOVER

He enumerated the steps he had taken to improve relations with the European Communist world, his hope to get Russian cooperation for peace in Vietnam, and in saving the expense of a cutthroat extravagant race to build anti-missile systems.

Indirectly he took a crack at his friend J. Edgar Hoover, whom he has continued as FBI Director three times beyond the statutory retirement age of 70, yet who has been undermining the President's Russian - American consular treaty.

Johnson scoffed at the idea that the treaty would permit more Soviet spies in the United States. The United States will get the same number of consulates in the USSR as Russia got in the USA, he said, and emphasized that American travelers would get better protection through these consulates.

"With 2,500 Soviets in this country," the President said, "I don't see who 25 or 30 more can be very dangerous."

Lady Bird was also at the reception and was introduced by Vice President Humphrey.

RUSK'S BRIEFING

Earlier, in the state department auditorium, Secretary Rusk briefed the business leaders off the record on the importance of promoting East-West trade.

There is nothing inconsistent, he said, about President Johnson's war against Communist forces in Vietnam and friendly overtures to Communist nations in Europe. The best way to end the Vietnam war, Rusk contended, was to improve relations with the Soviet bloc. Hanoi, he explained, is caught between Peking's militant anti - western policy and Moscow's peaceful coexistence policy. East - West trade, therefore, will demonstrate that Moscow is right, and perhaps persuade Hanoi to follow the same coexistence path.

The more Communist nations that can be attracted by trade to follow the coexistence line, Rusk argued, the more impressed North Vietnam will be.

Rusk said he wasn't concerned about building up a huge volume of trade; all he hopes to do is soften the rigid U.S. attitude against doing business behind the onetime Iron Curtain. Tariffs on Communist goods entering this country are two or three times higher than on non - Communist goods, and Rusk said removing these barriers would have a psychological effect on the Communist world and shorten the war.

Several other state department officials also briefed the business leaders about the importance of cooperation between the world's two giant nations. The only official who seemed slightly out of step was Dr. Eugene Rostow, former dean of the Yale Law School. He brought in the old theme about Communist aggression.

Note -- Last year, after Firestone Rubber had signed an agreement with Romania to build a tire plant there, it was scared off by the Young Americans for Freedom, a right-wing Republican organization, which had been working with a Firestone competitor, Goodyear. Last month, the Young Americans for Freedom announced jubilantly that they had scared American Motors away from its plan to sell Ramblers in Russia.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Walter Reuther Maneuvering Into Position To Launch Drive For "Union of the Poor"

Washington, D.C. -- Rusty-haired Walter Reuther, who has just unleashed his own cultural revolution inside labor, now is playing for big stakes -- a third militant, surging union federation built around his massive Auto Workers organization and a Hoffa-less, equally gargantuan teamsters brotherhood.

That's the consensus in labor's high command which he has been needing for months with rapier-like charges of hardening of their organizational arteries.

Thus, with a new force of some 3.2 million strategically placed followers, Reuther, the incomparable of the 1930s, leader of sitdowns, dynamo of the old CIO, would be free to unleash the mass movement of which he and his younger brother, Victor, have always dreamed.

Unfettered from strong ties with the venerable AFL-CIO, freed from disciplinary necessities of following the leadership of the 72-year-old veteran labor chief George Meany, and finally in a position to ignore directives and policies of the old giant AFL-CIO itself, Walter Reuther will begin a long planned drive for the unionization of millions of poor.

WIDER GOALS -- He will parallel this with new thrusts into the fields of white collar and professional employes such as teachers, nurses and employes of the federal government, where his goal in Washington, D.C., alone is 800,000 members.

Of course this would mean that he has to pull out of the 13.5 million member AFL-CIO. He could slip out of the huge labor network as easily as Houdini did out of a straitjacket. This could be done with a short, simple resolution at the United Auto Workers convention which its executive board has scheduled for April 20. They could just vote to disaffiliate.

Then, the Reuthers, with Jimmy Hoffa hitting the last mile to the Atlanta Penitentiary, could make their pitch for some sort of fraternal arrangement with the neighboring International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Both unions have their national headquarters in Detroit.

There has always been an off-the-record liaison with UAW and the teamsters. There need not necessarily be any form of affiliation at first. This could come later as Hoffa's influence diminishes.

But, the two giant unions would work closely all over the United States.

Such a coalition would make it quite easy for Reuther and his special aides inside the AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department -- an organization of some six million members with a treasury of $3 million -- to move into thousands of "communities of the poor."

Already one of Reuther's veteran organizers, Brendon Sexton, is directing a network stretching from Sleepy Hollows in Kentucky to the congested, teeming ghetto districts such as Watts, West Chicago, and Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant in New York City.

NEED NOT WAIT -- Reuther estimates that there are some 35 million working poor and they could be organized into some 10,000 units in loosely formed quasi-unions. Except for the fact that the workers' alliance of the 1930s was composed of unemployed, Reuther's contemplated network of the 1960s would parallel the alliance and people it with those he calls "the working poor." It could become a mighty force.

All this need not wait until he formally pulls out of the AFL-CIO -- if he ever does, which is by no means certain despite his resignation from the vice presidency. He simply could push ahead with his own organizational objectives, despite the fact that he has resigned as chairman of the AFL-CIO's standing committee on organization and economic policy.

Meanwhile he will continue to marshall a war of nerves against the AFL-CIO hierarchy which he claims, in his kindest moments, has become archaic and stuck in the plush of its own special society.

For the moment he is expected to find mighty little support inside the AFL-CIO. However there are a few leaders who might go along with him. But no one of consequence. Which is why he is expected to turn to that other giant, the Teamsters.

Together they could give the elders of today's labor movement a long run for their money and membership.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — One of life's little ordeals is having to cope with overly neat people.

You know the kind I mean:

If you give them a pigeon, they already have a pigeonhole waiting to put it into.

If you invite them into your home, the first thing they do is surreptitiously wipe their fingers on your cocktail table to see if your wife has dusted it lately.

If the first robin of spring alights outside their window, they shoo it away for fear it will ruin the perfection of their lawn by digging for worms.

Life for the overly neat person is a package deal, neatly wrapped and tied. His motto is, "A place for everything, and everything in its place."

This philosophy has a nice, high sounding ring to it - but the ring is hollow. If there is a place for everything, and everything is in its place, you've got a static universe and a dead world. It is a perfect description of a cemetery.

The trouble with neat people is that they aren't satisfied with merely having all their own things in their proper places. They feel a divine mission to come over to your place and put everything there in its right place. They demand that you be like them.

And there is only one defense possible for an untidy person when one of these unctuous reformers tries to mold your life into his own pallid, polished pattern. Look him squarely in the eye — and then spit in it.

The trouble with the overly neat person is that, basically, he was born into the wrong world. He hates surprise and change. He would like always to be carrying an umbrella when it rains and be wearing overshoes when it snows. Year-round, if he had his way, the sun would come up at the same time every morning and set at the same time every evening.

Unfortunately, the world isn't like that. The world is a lovely wilderness of welter and wonder, full of blind alleys and tremendous vistas, of flowers and thorns and bears and butterflies, of wasps and hidden honey, of poisonous plants and helpful herbs, of stinging thistles and ripening fruit.

Nature isn't at all overly neat. In nature everything - even the rocks that crack in winter —is in movement, trying to go from one place to another. Even the celestial spheres vary in their orbits. They hate too much order, too.

As a chronically untidy man myself, I hope that heaven for me will turn out to be as disorderly as the desk I keep. I hope it will turn out to be a junkpile a million miles wide and ten thousand miles high, where I can spend eternity cheerfully pawing through the debris in search of souvenirs.

That, of course, would be a hell to the overly tidy person. He aspires to a heaven that, like his life, is as planned as a cellblock.

Life does need some planning. But a life too planned can become an unplanned death.

Storms Keep Shelves Well Stocked

NEW YORK AP - The northeast snowstorms this week that kept Mom out of the grocery stores also left the stores' shelves stocked better than usual.

A large supermarket chain indicated it expected no supply problems.

Halibut steaks, swordfish steaks and fresh scallops are specials this week. Salmon, also, is a budgetary bright spot.

Other weekend specials are chicken fryers and boneless chuck.

Housewives also can take heart from an Agriculture Department suggestion that cattle supplies might continue plentiful further into this year than anticipated. The department had forecast that heavy cattle slaughter in the first of the year would taper off later as cattlemen rebuilt their herds.

A record-breaking citrus crop in Florida is producing trouble for the state's citrus industry. The state's largest grower cooperative anticipated the loss will total $50 million because the cost of producing a box of oranges is greater than the price the grower receives for it.

The program was a debate on whether or not a child should have an allowance. Mrs. Dale Geske, Mrs. Peter Myers and Dick Whiffen were debating the negative side. Tereasa Malloy, Virgie Walton and Bobbie Walton were debating affirmatively.

The annual skating party was set for Feb. 24. Club members and their families will meet at the Post Office at 5:30 p.m. and then go to the rink.

Mrs. Myers announced that charter night will be Friday, March 3. Each club will receive a gold, silver, or blue ribbon for their charter and awards will be given to leaders and junior leaders.

Ricky Whiffen reported on the market barrow project. Peter Myers reported on the beef project and told about feeding the steers.

The horsemanship project started Saturday at Nelson Lumsden's farm. The members watched the horses go through the walk, trot, cantor, gallop and singlefoot. Then, they rode to feel the difference in these paces. They learned to neck rein and lead a horse.

Bertha Robinson led the club in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "My Country 'Tis' of Thee."

Bobbie Walton closed the meeting with a benediction.

A3c and Mrs. Orland James Bollinger, Jr.

Miss Linda Kay Glueck Is Bride of A3c Bollinger

DENVER, COLO. - Chapel Four, Lowry air force base, was the setting for the 10 a.m. Christmas Eve wedding of Miss Linda Kay Glueck and A3c Orland James Bollinger, Jr.

The former Miss Glueck is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Glueck, route one, Illmo, Mo., and Bollinger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Orland J. Bollinger of Benton, Mo.

The Rev. Robert H. Mooney performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with arrangements of poinsettias.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight taffeta peau de soie. The floor-length skirt was A line. The close fitted bodice was sleeveless and featured a renaissance neckline. The front of the bodice and skirt was overlaid with Chantilly re-embroidered lace, sprinkled with seed pearls and crystals. A Cardinal coat with long fitted sleeves swept to a full chapel train. Insets of lace highlighted the coat.

The bride's headdress was a cap of lace petals outlined and sprinkled with seed pearls centered with a cluster of lily of the valley. An elbow-length, bouffant veil of imported silk illusion encircled the headpiece. She carried a bouquet of red and white carnations surrounded by holly leaves and wore a lavaliere, a gift from the groom.

The bride's sister, Miss Judy Glueck, was maid of honor. Miss Lana Glueck, another sister, was bridesmaid. Their red velvet formal-length gowns were fashioned with fitted bodices and elbow-length sleeves. The skirts were softly pleated. They wore pearl centered heart-shaped necklaces, gifts from the bride, and carried red and white carnation bouquets with holly leaves.

Bollinger chose A3c Jack Hopkins, Jr., as best man and A3c Paul Turner as groomsman. Both men are stationed at Lowry air force base.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a dinner at the Holiday Inn. A Christmas theme and white wedding bells were featured in the decorations.

The Rivera Club was the setting for the rehearsal dinner on the eve of the wedding. The groom's parents were hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Tirmenstein of Benton, aunt and uncle of the groom, and Freddie and Roger Glueck, brothers of the bride, also attended the wedding.

Mrs. Bollinger attended Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau, Mo. Her husband is a 1966 graduate of the college with a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He completed his basic training at Lackland air force base, Texas, before being transferred to his present base.

The couple is living at 1684 Clinton St.

Storms Keep Shelves Well Stocked

NEW YORK AP - The northeast snowstorms this week that kept Mom out of the grocery stores also left the stores' shelves stocked better than usual.

A large supermarket chain indicated it expected no supply problems.

Halibut steaks, swordfish steaks and fresh scallops are specials this week. Salmon, also, is a budgetary bright spot.

Other weekend specials are chicken fryers and boneless chuck.

Housewives also can take heart from an Agriculture Department suggestion that cattle supplies might continue plentiful further into this year than anticipated. The department had forecast that heavy cattle slaughter in the first of the year would taper off later as cattlemen rebuilt their herds.

A record-breaking citrus crop in Florida is producing trouble for the state's citrus industry. The state's largest grower cooperative anticipated the loss will total $50 million because the cost of producing a box of oranges is greater than the price the grower receives for it.

Maris Expected To Sign Card Contract Today

ST. LOUIS A) - With home run king Roger Maris apparently in the fold, St. Louis Cardinal General Manager Stan Musial can turn his attention to a few more unsigned players and the troublesome grass in Busch Memorial Stadium.

Maris, recently traded to the Cardinals from the New York Yankees, was to meet today with Musial at Busch Stadium. He was expected to sign a contract for the coming season for $75,000, about what he was paid with New York.

Maris hit 61 home runs in 1961, a record for the 162-game season adopted with league expansion.

One of the apparent Cardinal holdouts is catcher Tim McCarver.

McCarver and Musial met Wednesday. Later, McCarver said, "we're not close."

McCarver is believed seeking a contract for $30,000 to $35,000. He led the league in triples last year with 13 and caught 148 games. Only the Chicago Cubs' Randy Hundley appeared in more games in a catching role.

Even if Musial signs all his players the team may not make the home opener April 11.

Pickets appeared Wednesday at the stadium and slowed sodding work on the playing field.

The first sodding job at the stadium, which opened only last summer, didn't pan out. Experts said too much clay in the soil prevented proper drainage.

The dispute over the grass stems from one union's position that the re-sodding is new work and should not be handled by stadium maintenance personnel.

Stadium officials decided to replace the grass with sod from the farm of Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller. The new sod is said to be more porous than the original stadium soil.

COLUMBIA, MO., -- Returning to Brewer field house for its first home game in two months, Missouri's freshman basketball team tangles with Kansas State here on Tuesday, prior to the Tiger-Wildcat varsity game.

Going into last Thursday's road meeting with Kansas, Coach Bob Price's squad stood at 2-2 with early-season home-court wins over Quincy College's junior varsity and St. Louis, and defeats at St. Louis and Nebraska.

SPORTS CORNER

Former Howardville Cage Star Now Star With Army

EDITOR'S NOTE -- The following is from the Fort Leonard Wood Guidon. Many area basketball fans remember the back court ace of Howardville High -- Linnie McFerren. . . .

Behind the combined 53-point effort of backcourt tandem Lennie McFerren and Joe Lott, Echo -1-3 won the Company-level Post Basketball Championship on Jan. 19 with an 80-72 trimming of E-4-2.

It was the second straight title for a representative from the 3d Brigade.

Most of the credit, at least statistically, belonged to McFerren, a 5-foot-10 speedster from Howardsville, Mo., and Lott, his 6-2 runningmate former All-State Missouri prep cager.

McFerren tallied 28 points in all on 13 baskets and a pair of free throws while Lott contributed 25 on 11 field goals and three charity throws.

Individually, however, it was the loser's Terry Morgan, a 6-4 jumping-jack who blinked the scoreboard 37 times, taking high point honors. Morgan, a former Anderson High School and Anderson College, a Indiana product, was just about all that kept the title game from turning into a rout in the second half. In that period he hit 15 of 20 shots from the field that almost overcame an 11-point deficit - 38-27 - that the victors had built up by the intermission.

Winning Coach Robert Hallett called the "turning point when Lott hit two free throws with about two minutes left in the game. They had closed to two points at that time and were rallying but Lott's throws snuffed it and helped pull us away to the final margin."

Echo-1-3 had held a slim 17-15 edge at the end of the first period but four baskets by McFerren, and a pair each from Lott and team captain Richard Schlegelmilch highlighted a 21-point second period that gave the winners their comfortable half time lead.

"It was the toughest game-both offensively and defensively - we played in the entire tournament," Schlegelmilch said. "Their big man (Morgan) really put on a show. We held him down in the first half but got into foul trouble by doing it so we had to lay off a little near the end."

Rolla Miners To Cape Saturday

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Southeast Missouri will be hoping to solidify its second-place standing in the MIAA when it hosts the Miners of the University of Missouri Rolla in an 8 p.m. game Saturday in Houck Field House.

The Indians will also be clinging to slim title hopes, although their 5-2 conference record leaves little practical chance to derail nationally ranked Springfield State, which is breezing along with a 6-0 mark.

Theoretically, all conference teams with the exception of Maryville State, at 1-7, have a mathematical chance to tie for the title, but such an eventuality would require four losses by Springfield in their four remaining conference games. With the odds against such a disaster, the real battle now is for the runnerup spot.

Cape enters Saturday's game the favorite, based on its 74-69 defeat of the Miners last week at Rolla, but the improved UMR squad, which earlier dumped a good Warrensburg team, stands as a major threat. The Miners are also in the running for second place with their 3-4 record, equal on the loss side to Kirksville's 4-4. Warrensburg may yet prove the strongest contender, despite a 2-4 mark.

Pacing the Indian attack both for the season and in last week's fracas at Rolla is center Kermit Meystedt. The 6-6 senior last week boosted his scoring and rebounding averages to 19.2 and 14.2 as he hit 23 points and took 18 rebounds.

The other senior in the Cape starting lineup, guard Curtis Williams, is a closs runnerup in scoring with an 18.0 average. Third in scoring is sophomore forward Dan Milligan with 14.8. Milligan is second in rebounding with a 10.2 average per game.

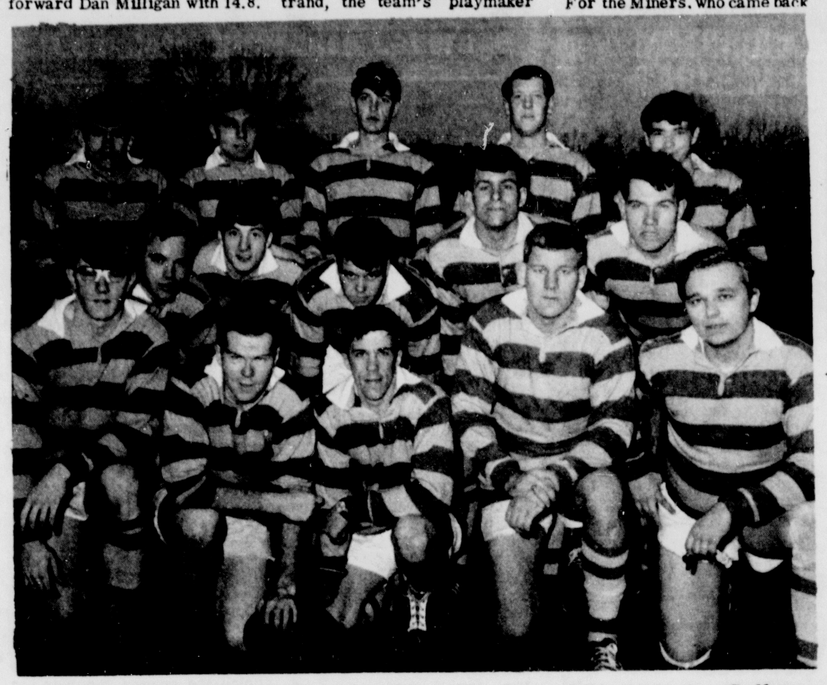

Junior guard Charlie Bertrand, the team's playmaker and one of the top ball-handlers in the conference, is averaging 13.9.

For the Miners, who came back from a 16-point deficit last week against the Indians, to almost pull the game out of the fire, guard Randy Vessell stands out as the top gun with his 19-point average.

Running-mate Charles Andrew is second in average to Vessell, although held to nine points last Saturday.

Mizzou Meets Buffs

COLUMBIA -- The brooding Buffaloes await Ol' Mizzou's invasion out in Boulder Saturday night - and that's more bad news for the Tigers.

Colorado lost a televised basketball game to Oklahoma at Norman Saturday, 71-66, one which they seemingly had wrapped up until the Sooners rallied decisively down the stretch.

So the Buffs' mountain hideout will be a bristling battleground for Missouri, a team that's picked up more than its share of wounds this winter. The Bengals are 3-15 for the year, and 1-6 in conference combat.

Colorado stands 11-7 overall, and is third in the league at 4-2. Tallest regular for Coach Sox Walseth is Bob Bauers, 6-5 senior -- while guards Pat Frink and Lynn Baker are the chief threats. Frink hit spectacularly against O.U., 12 of 18 scrimmage shots, while Baker is a heady, adroit playmaker.

Losing Booker Brown and Gene Jones on grades at the semester, Coach Bob Vanatta and Dave Bennett as starters. At center, 6-8 Rich Milling and 6-5 Gary Frazier have been sharing time -- with flashy-but-erratic Tom Johnson the fifth regular.

Missouri had Oklahoma down, 30-25, just before halftime her Tuesday but O.U., compensating for a 13-point night by Don Sidle, hit 18 of 19 second-half free throws in a 75-65 win.

Coleman now has 1,154 career points -- third-best on M.U.'s all-time chart. The slick-shooting Jefferson Citian is 34 short of Bob Reiter's 1,188 - point harvest, a four-year feat.

Mizzou returns home Tuesday night, meeting Kansas State.

Maris Expected To Sign Card Contract Today

ST. LOUIS A) - With home run king Roger Maris apparently in the fold, St. Louis Cardinal General Manager Stan Musial can turn his attention to a few more unsigned players and the troublesome grass in Busch Memorial Stadium.

Maris, recently traded to the Cardinals from the New York Yankees, was to meet today with Musial at Busch Stadium. He was expected to sign a contract for the coming season for $75,000, about what he was paid with New York.

Maris hit 61 home runs in 1961, a record for the 162-game season adopted with league expansion.

One of the apparent Cardinal holdouts is catcher Tim McCarver.

McCarver and Musial met Wednesday. Later, McCarver said, "we're not close."

McCarver is believed seeking a contract for $30,000 to $35,000. He led the league in triples last year with 13 and caught 148 games. Only the Chicago Cubs' Randy Hundley appeared in more games in a catching role.

Even if Musial signs all his players the team may not make the home opener April 11.

Pickets appeared Wednesday at the stadium and slowed sodding work on the playing field.

The first sodding job at the stadium, which opened only last summer, didn't pan out. Experts said too much clay in the soil prevented proper drainage.

The dispute over the grass stems from one union's position that the re-sodding is new work and should not be handled by stadium maintenance personnel.

Stadium officials decided to replace the grass with sod from the farm of Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller. The new sod is said to be more porous than the original stadium soil.

Tomlinson Third Leading Point Maker For Tigers

COLUMBIA, MO., -- Returning to Brewer field house for its first home game in two months, Missouri's freshman basketball team tangles with Kansas State here on Tuesday, prior to the Tiger-Wildcat varsity game.

Going into last Thursday's road meeting with Kansas, Coach Bob Price's squad stood at 2-2 with early-season home-court wins over Quincy College's junior varsity and St. Louis, and defeats at St. Louis and Nebraska.

Former Howardville Cage Star Now Star With Army

EDITOR'S NOTE -- The following is from the Fort Leonard Wood Guidon. Many area basketball fans remember the back court ace of Howardville High -- Linnie McFerren. . . .

Behind the combined 53-point effort of backcourt tandem Lennie McFerren and Joe Lott, Echo -1-3 won the Company-level Post Basketball Championship on Jan. 19 with an 80-72 trimming of E-4-2.

It was the second straight title for a representative from the 3d Brigade.

Most of the credit, at least statistically, belonged to McFerren, a 5-foot-10 speedster from Howardsville, Mo., and Lott, his 6-2 runningmate former All-State Missouri prep cager.

McFerren tallied 28 points in all on 13 baskets and a pair of free throws while Lott contributed 25 on 11 field goals and three charity throws.

Individually, however, it was the loser's Terry Morgan, a 6-4 jumping-jack who blinked the scoreboard 37 times, taking high point honors. Morgan, a former Anderson High School and Anderson College, a Indiana product, was just about all that kept the title game from turning into a rout in the second half. In that period he hit 15 of 20 shots from the field that almost overcame an 11-point deficit - 38-27 - that the victors had built up by the intermission.

Winning Coach Robert Hallett called the "turning point when Lott hit two free throws with about two minutes left in the game. They had closed to two points at that time and were rallying but Lott's throws snuffed it and helped pull us away to the final margin."

Echo-1-3 had held a slim 17-15 edge at the end of the first period but four baskets by McFerren, and a pair each from Lott and team captain Richard Schlegelmilch highlighted a 21-point second period that gave the winners their comfortable half time lead.

"It was the toughest game-both offensively and defensively - we played in the entire tournament," Schlegelmilch said. "Their big man (Morgan) really put on a show. We held him down in the first half but got into foul trouble by doing it so we had to lay off a little near the end."

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

WASHPAN AND ROLLER TOWEL

When I was a boy the washpan and roller towel occupied prominent places in the family's scheme of things. On getting up in the morning each member of the family would go immediately to the kitchen to wash their faces and comb their hair in preparation for breakfast. The washpan was set close to the cedar water bucket, from which two or three dippers of water would be transferred to the pan. By its side was a dish of soft soap, which very generally was ignored by the boys.

The girls always were dainty about their ablutions, being careful about getting water on table or floor. Boys went about it very boisterously, dashing the water to their faces and splashing a lot of it on the floor while carrying it up in cupped hands and swishing it back and forth across their faces. The fact that this irritated mother and the girls probably had something to do with the performance.

When the weather was warm the washpan was moved to a keg or box just outside the kitchen door. Those who liked to pose as he-men who could take it would continue to do the job out of doors when a skim of ice had to be broken. There was a place for the roller towel in the kitchen and on the back of the house. It always was close to washpan and water bucket. The allowance usually was one towel for a week. In other words, when each masculine member of the family was getting a fresh shirt and underwear on Sunday morning and each feminine member was getting fresh apparel, all to be worn through the entire ensuing week, a crisp roller towel was put into service. Incidentially, I probably was 12 years old when underwear for boys came into vogue.

The comb, too, was a family institution. It either hung on a string or small chain beside the looking glass or lay in easy reach on a near-by shelf. It received very little wear and tear from the boys.

Only those who lived in the roller towel and cedar-bucket days know the merits of water from a cedar container. Always the bucket was held together by brass bands, which required a considerable amount of polishing. The contrast between that shiny metal and the cedar wood made it a thing of pride and joy to the family.

Those were the days which preceded germs and individual drinking cups. Everybody went to the kitchen when they were thirsty and drank from the same dipper. In our home we sometimes substituted a gourd for that tin utensil. Anybody who has drunk from a gourd will testify that in some mysterious way it enhances the drinking quality of water and makes it more pleasing to the palate. Gourds are still grown on vines in this locality, but only for ornamental purposes.

WHEN TRAMPS WERE NUMEROUS

Tramps were quite numerous during the washpan, roller towel and waterbucket era. Few people turned them away. Some housewives would fill a sack with biscuit, meat and other things that were left from the last meal, handing it to the tramp as he waited outside the kitchen door. At our house, he always was invited into the kitchen and given a seat at the table with the family if his visit came at our meal time. If in mid-morning or mid-afternoon, our mother would give him, a chair and a newspaper and tell him to feel at home while she made hot coffee, fried meat and warmed left-over biscuit. Always, however, he was required to wash and comb his hair. He dried his face on the roller towel and did his combing with the family comb.

My mother gave two reasons for her hospitality. One was that it was a Christian duty. The other was that, having five boys of her own, one who might become a tramp, she would want him treated as well as she treated the wandering son of some other mother who came to her door. After the tramp had gone she also would comfort herself by reflecting that the Scriptures encourage hospitality by saying that there were times when we entertained angels unawares.

During this era, there was not a bathtub in our town. Every family, including the wealthiest, obtained needed water from its own well. Washpans and washbowls were used for bathing purposes. The humorous references now made to Saturday night bathing are inspired by traditions which come down from the washpan and roller towel era, during which people never though of bathing except on that occasion.

Three quarts of water was good for most anybody's bath. But our mothers took nothing for granted when boys returned washpan and soft soap to their place in the kitchen. The ordeal was not over until she had inspected neck and ears, to see that they had not been neglected. Most always, she grabbed washrag and soap, and gave them a real going over for good measure.

THE COMING OF BASEBALL

When I was a boy something new swept like wildfire through the villages, towns and cities of this country. It was the game of baseball. Here in Paris, Mo., it was introduced by a schoolteacher named Iglehart. Within a few weeks our team, the Paris Rosebuds, was issuing challenges to what was called match games with Shelbina, Monroe City, Mexico and other towns that were only two to four hours distant by horsedrawn vehicles. With good livery teams, about 10 miles could be covered in one hour.

I recall that in those early days of what is now our great national game the catcher stood about 15 feet behind the batter, taking balls on the bounce. If he caught the bounce on the third strike the batter was out.

Those were difficult days for the Pitcher. This was because the batter had his choice of three sorts of balls. When he stepped into the batter's box the umpire would inquire, "What kind of a ball?" If he said, "A low ball," the delivery must be below the knee. If he said, "A high ball," it would have to be about the shoulder. If he said, "A fair ball" it must be about the waist. Otherwise it was a ball.

To further complicate the pitcher's job, there came a time when underhand delivery was required. Unless the hand swept just below the knee, a ball was called, no matter how nicely it had crossed the plate.

There was a note of chivalry to the game in those early days. It came immediately after the contest was over. The losing side gathered in the pitcher's box and was surrounded by the winners. At a signal from the umpire the winning captain would say "Three cheers for Paris," whereupon the balance of his team would shout, "Hip, hip, hu-ray", all of which would be repeated three imes.

During the first year or two after its introduction, none of the baseball players wore gloves. The first concession to this custom came when catchers began "taking them off the bat," as it was called when they began posting themselves about four feet behind the batters. It then became permissible for the catcher to use an ordinary leather work glove from which the fingers had been cut off. Thus, the palm of the hand was all that was protected.

During the crucial game of a series with Mexico, which was played before the amphitheater on the Paris Fairgrounds, Bob White, editor of the Mexico Ledger, did the umpiring. He was the father of the present editor, L. Mitchell White. Among the large crowd of spectators was Judge Theodore Brace, then Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Missouri. His son, Ned was the Paris team's star performer. It was the first game the Judge had ever seen. Along about the seventh inning a wild ball from the pitcher's box hit Umpire White squarely upon the nose, injuring him so severely that he had to be carried off the field. He got no sympathy from Judge Brace, who said:

"It served him right. That fellow had been standing there interfering ever since the game started."

Highlighting the 90th birthday event will be the promotion of 52 key values, one to be featured each week throughout the year at a very low price. Announcement of these special values will be made in this paper throughout the coming year.

Rose explained that his store is participating in a 90th Anniversary nationwide sweepstakes being sponsored by all Ben Franklin stores. Nine "Pick-Your-Trip" prizes will be awarded to nine lucky couples.

Six-Point Plan Urged to Combat Auto Theft

LEE'S SUMMIT (AP) - A six-point program to cope with automobile thefts was outlined Tuesday at a seminar.

William J. Davis, manager of the National Automobile Theft Bureau, spoke to about 175 law enforcement officers. The seminar was sponsored by the bureau and the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Cars valued at $54 million were stolen and not returned in 1966, Davis said. Determined, cooperative efforts of the public, law enforcement agencies and the courts are needed, he said.

The bureau's suggested program:

1. Municipal ordinances requring motorists to lock their cars.
2. Public support for auto theft preventive measures.
3. Passage of uniform title registration laws by all states.
4. Legislation to stop sale of master keys through mail-order houses.
5. Increased cooperation between the courts and law enforcement officials to prosecute offenders.
6. Car theft preventive measures which could be built-in features on all automobiles. This would include better positioning of locking devices on the instrument panel and making the lock as inaccessible as possible.

There was a note of chivalry to the game in those early days. It came immediately after the contest was over. The losing side gathered in the pitcher's box and was surrounded by the winners. At a signal from the umpire the winning captain would say "Three cheers for Paris," whereupon the balance of his team would shout, "Hip, hip, hu-ray", all of which would be repeated three imes.

During the first year or two after its introduction, none of the baseball players wore gloves. The first concession to this custom came when catchers began "taking them off the bat," as it was called when they began posting themselves about four feet behind the batters. It then became permissible for the catcher to use an ordinary leather work glove from which the fingers had been cut off. Thus, the palm of the hand was all that was protected.

During the crucial game of a series with Mexico, which was played before the amphitheater on the Paris Fairgrounds, Bob White, editor of the Mexico Ledger, did the umpiring. He was the father of the present editor, L. Mitchell White. Among the large crowd of spectators was Judge Theodore Brace, then Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Missouri. His son, Ned was the Paris team's star performer. It was the first game the Judge had ever seen. Along about the seventh inning a wild ball from the pitcher's box hit Umpire White squarely upon the nose, injuring him so severely that he had to be carried off the field. He got no sympathy from Judge Brace, who said:

"It served him right. That fellow had been standing there interfering ever since the game started."

Stores to Celebrate 90th Anniversary

Charles Rose, manager of Ben Franklin Store, announced today that more than 2,400 Ben Franklin stores, located in each of the 50 states, plan to stage a year-long celebration during 1967 commemorating the 90th Anniversary of the founders of Ben Franklin stores.

Highlighting the 90th birthday event will be the promotion of 52 key values, one to be featured each week throughout the year at a very low price. Announcement of these special values will be made in this paper throughout the coming year.

Rose explained that his store is participating in a 90th Anniversary nationwide sweepstakes being sponsored by all Ben Franklin stores. Nine "Pick-Your-Trip" prizes will be awarded to nine lucky couples.

First prize will be a two-week, all expense trip for two to anywhere in the world, plus eight second prizes of all-expense trips for two to anywhere in the Continental United States.

Six-Point Plan Urged to Combat Auto Theft

LEE'S SUMMIT (AP) - A six-point program to cope with automobile thefts was outlined Tuesday at a seminar.

William J. Davis, manager of the National Automobile Theft Bureau, spoke to about 175 law enforcement officers. The seminar was sponsored by the bureau and the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Cars valued at $54 million were stolen and not returned in 1966, Davis said. Determined, cooperative efforts of the public, law enforcement agencies and the courts are needed, he said.

The bureau's suggested program:

1. Municipal ordinances requring motorists to lock their cars.
2. Public support for auto theft preventive measures.
3. Passage of uniform title registration laws by all states.
4. Legislation to stop sale of master keys through mail-order houses.
5. Increased cooperation between the courts and law enforcement officials to prosecute offenders.
6. Car theft preventive measures which could be built-in features on all automobiles. This would include better positioning of locking devices on the instrument panel and making the lock as inaccessible as possible.

Malden Favors School Bond

MALDEN -- Voters approved a $340,000 bond issue in special election Tuesday which will provide a total of 20 additional classrooms, plus library and office space to the Malden School system.

The bond issue, presented for the first time, was adopted by a vote of 581 to 104. It will call for a tax levy increase of 50 cents on $100 property valuation, raising the present levy of $3.30 to $3.80 per $100 valuation.

According to Alva DaVault, superintendent of schools, the funds will be used for the construction of 12 classrooms to be attached to the present junior high school facilities and eight classrooms, a library and office will be added to the Science and Math Building, which was constructed in 1962.

The building additions will be of brick and steel paneling to match the present buildings and will contain approximately 28,000 square feet of new construction. The work is expected to begin on the school additions within 90 days and will be a 10 to 12 month building project, DaVault said.

Town authorities in Herbstein, Germany, decided that every newly married couple must plant three sapling birches on the Strasse der Ehe, or Marriage Road. Within a year, 150 white-barked birch trees stood along the road. Authorities report that the custom is attracting more weddings to Herbstein, and that brides and grooms return on wedding anniversaries to check on their trees.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

A bill now being considered in the Missouri General Assembly, would follow the Governors recommendation for improving the schools foundation program. It would increase the distribution of state money to the schools by $9,975,428.00 per year. Equalization would be increased from $137.25 to $139.25 per pupil in average attendance. A second level equalization which would go to schools voting a sufficiently high local levy to indicate their effort to support their own schools, would be increased from $13 to $14. A flat grant payment on a per pupil enrollment basis would be increased from $122.25 to $132.50. While this is a comparatively small addition in state support for schools, not nearly allowing us to keep up with the other states, it still will be most helpful. Our board has based its improved salary schedule on the probability that this bill for more state funds will be passed.

The climate of interest in better education in the Missouri General Assembly would seem to indicate that the bill will be approved.

Vocational education, such as is provided in our SEMO Trade-Technical Institute and operated by the Board of Education for our school and neighboring schools is expensive. Vocational education requires small classes. The equipment used is very costly. Vocational teachers normally work a longer day, thus earn additional pay. All these factors add to the cost. Our district could not provide this kind of training opportunities for our youth and adults if it had to be paid only from local funds.

Federal funding through the states, makes most of the programs possible, pay some 30% to full costs. The cost per pupil above that provided through Federal funds, in the case of students coming from other schools is paid for by the sending school district.

Four hundred twenty-four students from this school are enrolled in vocational education. One hundred twenty-three students from: Charleston, East Prairie, Matthews, Kelley, Scott Central, Chaffee, and Scott City schools participate. A larger enrollment is expected next year.

The Sikeston Public Schools system is one of the community's largest employers. During the past school year, more than $1.5 million paid in salaries was available as expendable income here. Add to this the money spent for fuel, gasoline and oil, public utilities, insurance, maintenance, supplies and various other services for the instruction of 4000 day students and 1730 adults. The educational and economic importance is apparent.

The field house which is being planned for construction and which along with other needed school additions will be built if the bond issue passes, will be the largest physical education and athletic building between St. Louis and Memphis. Because of its simple construction it will not be the most costly. It will provide space for a much improved physical education and athletic program. It will have enough space to seat 4500-5500 spectators, when this number of seats can be added. The basketball floor and the seating will be removable to allow a large uncluttered floor area for school and community use, large group gatherings and exhibits.

Plans are to add a second level or balcony to the Senior High school library, if the bond issue passes, to provide additional book stack and study space.

Tentative plans are to build a new and much larger study center for the high school some time in the near future, when the funds are available. It would provide not only book and library material space, study areas, but also mechanical or electronic study aids for better learning and research. The present library would then probably be given over to the language arts and social studies department for their specialized uses. The addition of the new learning center may be several years in the future.

About 28,000 school administrators will attend the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators next week. About every problem relating to education and to its improvement will be discussed during the hundreds of small group and general sessions which will be held. Manufacturers and suppliers of educational devices and services will also have exhibits.

The "Full Faith And Credit" Clause of The United States Constitution

4. CHOICE OF LAW

To the average person involved in a lawsuit, the notion of "choice of law" must seem anomalous. He has no choice of law; he must obey whatever law the court tells him is applicable. However, the court deciding the case has a "choice of law" whenever the transaction involves more than one place. It must decide which body of legal rules to use, its own, or the rules of law laid down by one or another of the various places involved.

As between fully sovereign, independent nations, the use by the courts of one country of the legal rules pertaining elsewhere is not a matter of binding legal obligations. Rather, it rests on civilized notions of fairness which protect the justifiable expectations of the parties by applying to the transaction the rules of law applicable at the place which is connected with the transaction. For example, if two Englishmen make a contract in London to be performed in London, or if they get into an automobile accident in London, they would be very surprised to find that their legal rights and liabilities were going to be determined by the law of Virginia merely because one of them sued the other in a Virginia court.

These fundamental concepts of fairness in the judicial process are embodied in the due process clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, which forbid Federal courts and State courts, respectively, from taking property without due process of law. Thus, the application by an American court of a body of legal principles having nothing whatever to do with a transaction to determine the legal effect of the transaction would be an unconstitutional taking of property without due process of law. This would be true even where the transaction occurred outside of the United States, and hence the requirements of the full faith and credit clause had no application.

Time Against Mao Even If Foes Beaten

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviets and the Chinese Communists each took about 17 years to digest their revolutions, and then they had convulsions. For another 19 years, the Soviets were in Doctor Stalin's sickbed.

The Chinese may recover sooner because of the difference in age between Stalin and Doctor Mao Tse-tung at the time of the convulsions. Mao is an old man. Therein lies, perhaps, the West's best hope for the future.

The murder of a party friend in 1934—17 years after the Bolshevik revolution — gave Stalin the take-off point for wiping out any possible opposition in the bloody purges of the 1930s.

He was 55 when the purges began and he remained in total control another 19 years until his death in 1953, although his energy and ambitions were distracted by World War II.

If there had been no war, the U.S.S.R. might have been different now, and the world also. Certainly if Stalin had lasted longer, the Soviets would have been slower turning toward more moderation.

He had one policy: Progress for the U.S.S.R. And it made progress, industrially and scientifically. But the people paid the price in lives, sacrifices and suppression.

In 1966, Mao, 17 years after his Red Chinese took over mainland China, began his rampage against some of his old associates and the new bureaucracy. Revisionists, he called them, which is another word for reactionaries.

This is what he called the Soviets, to explain his break with them.

If he wins, with his primitive concepts of organizing a nation, he will set China back but that cannot last long. He is 73.

There is a difference between Mao and Stalin seldom mentioned. While Stalin shot his foes and rivals, reports from China do not tell of executions as the solution to differences of opinion. At least, not yet.

When Mao fades or dies, provided he wins now, those closest to him may, like Stalin's lieutenants after his death, repudiate him and seek a more flexible, modern nation. If they try to continue his rigid policies, there may be a revolution by the anti-Maoists who have waited for the chance.

That his extreme policies cannot continue indefinitely seems sure. Like Stalin, Mao was an original revolutionary with all that means in obsession, with an ideology and search for power, self-discipline and self-sacrifice, and total dedication.

But the newer generations of Chinese, lacking the revolutionary experience, cannot help viewing the world and their homeland a little differently. Further, like the Soviet generations which emerged after the Bolshevik revolution, the new Chinese have a growing sense of security in jobs, homes, or party positions.

The penniless, drifting revolutionaries had nothing to lose but their lives. Their successors do. This makes for more reluctance to risk drastic changes or possible loss through internal upheavals or, perhaps, war. When that happens, ideology becomes a little more secondary.

For example: The U.S.S.R.'s present leaders, in control of a vastly developed homeland, will think twice before losing everything in an atomic war.

In time, the Chinese can be expected to do the same. But in the end all this may be something less than an unmixed blessing for the West.

If the new Chinese patch up their quarrel with the Soviets, and the two Communist giants become solid allies, it will be a nightmare power bloc for the West.

The "Full Faith And Credit" Clause of The United States Constitution

4. CHOICE OF LAW

To the average person involved in a lawsuit, the notion of "choice of law" must seem anomalous. He has no choice of law; he must obey whatever law the court tells him is applicable. However, the court deciding the case has a "choice of law" whenever the transaction involves more than one place. It must decide which body of legal rules to use, its own, or the rules of law laid down by one or another of the various places involved.

As between fully sovereign, independent nations, the use by the courts of one country of the legal rules pertaining elsewhere is not a matter of binding legal obligations. Rather, it rests on civilized notions of fairness which protect the justifiable expectations of the parties by applying to the transaction the rules of law applicable at the place which is connected with the transaction. For example, if two Englishmen make a contract in London to be performed in London, or if they get into an automobile accident in London, they would be very surprised to find that their legal rights and liabilities were going to be determined by the law of Virginia merely because one of them sued the other in a Virginia court.

These fundamental concepts of fairness in the judicial process are embodied in the due process clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, which forbid Federal courts and State courts, respectively, from taking property without due process of law. Thus, the application by an American court of a body of legal principles having nothing whatever to do with a transaction to determine the legal effect of the transaction would be an unconstitutional taking of property without due process of law. This would be true even where the transaction occurred outside of the United States, and hence the requirements of the full faith and credit clause had no application.

Time Against Mao Even If Foes Beaten

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviets and the Chinese Communists each took about 17 years to digest their revolutions, and then they had convulsions. For another 19 years, the Soviets were in Doctor Stalin's sickbed.

The Chinese may recover sooner because of the difference in age between Stalin and Doctor Mao Tse-tung at the time of the convulsions. Mao is an old man. Therein lies, perhaps, the West's best hope for the future.

The murder of a party friend in 1934—17 years after the Bolshevik revolution -- gave Stalin the take-off point for wiping out any possible opposition in the bloody purges of the 1930s.

He was 55 when the purges began and he remained in total control another 19 years until his death in 1953, although his energy and [illegible] were distracted by World War II.

If there had been no war, the U.S.S.R. might have been different now, and the world also. Certainly if Stalin had lasted longer, the Soviets would have been slower turning toward more moderation.

He had one policy: Progress for the U.S.S.R. And it made progress, industrially and scientifically. But the people paid the price in lives, sacrifices and suppression.

In 1966, Mao, 17 years after his Red Chinese took over mainland China, began his rampage against some of his old associates and the new bureaucracy. Revisionists, he called them, which is another word for reactionaries.

This is what he called the Soviets, to explain his break with them.

If he wins, with his primitive concepts of organizing a nation, he will set China back but that cannot last long. He is 73.

There is a difference between Mao and Stalin seldom mentioned. While Stalin shot his foes and rivals, reports from China do not tell of executions as the solution to differences of opinion. At least, not yet.

When Mao fades or dies, provided he wins now, those closest to him may, like Stalin's lieutenants after his death, repudiate him and seek a more flexible, modern nation. If they try to continue his rigid policies, there may be a revolution by the anti-Maoists who have waited for the chance.

That his extreme policies cannot continue indefinitely seems sure. Like Stalin, Mao was an original revolutionary with all that means in obsession, with an ideology and search for power, self-discipline and self-sacrifice, and total dedication.

But the newer generations of Chinese, lacking the revolutionary experience, cannot help viewing the world and their homeland a little differently. Further, like the Soviet generations which emerged after the Bolshevik revolution, the new Chinese have a growing sense of security in jobs, homes, or party positions.

The penniless, drifting revolutionaries had nothing to lose but their lives. Their successors do. This makes for more reluctance to risk drastic changes or possible loss through internal upheavals or, perhaps, war. When that happens, ideology becomes a little more secondary.

For example: The U.S.S.R.'s present leaders, in control of a vastly developed homeland, will think twice before losing everything in an atomic war.

In time, the Chinese can be expected to do the same. But in the end all this may be something less than an unmixed blessing for the West.

If the new Chinese patch up their quarrel with the Soviets, and the two Communist giants become solid allies, it will be a nightmare power bloc for the West.

641 Boys In Cub Scouting In Okeechobee District

In conjunction with Boy Scout Week recognition is being given area Scout leaders for their service.

Cub Scouting in the Okeechobee district now has 641 boys, 8 to 10, participating. The figure represents 36 per cent of the available boys in the Cub Scout age group.

Sikeston has 231 registered Cub Scouts, serving 44 per cent of the available boys. The program is growing and the outlook for 1967 is promising, Eddie Schrader, Scout executive, said.

The Cub Scouting program provides an opportunity for parents to increase the character development of their children. It also provides the boys with an opportunity to learn from each other.

The program is carried on in the home and in small neighborhood groups (dens), meeting weekly under the leadership of a den mother, assisted by a Boy Scout, or den chief.

An age-graded program of achievement leads boys to the ranks of wolf, bear and lion.

Recognition and encouragement are provided by a monthly pack meeting attended by the boys and parents of all dens. Projects are displayed and awards are made at the monthly meetings.

The program is designed to make the boys strive to do their best, to help others, to improve personal habits, to respect others and develop an understanding of a group relationship, to develop a mutual understanding with parents and to become Boy Scouts.

Cub masters in the Okeechobee district are: Elwayne Fry, pack 37, East Prairie, sponsored by the East Prairie Kiwanis Club; C.C. Groves, pack 40 for the past 15 years, sponsored by the Sikeston Southwest School P.T.A.; Elza Ayers, pack 42, Bertrand, sponsored by the Bertrand P.T.A.

Stock Market Rough On Impulsive Buyer

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The amateur stock market speculator is one of the most curious psychological packages produced by the human race.

He sometimes forgets so as to hide from pain. He convinces himself that he has learned his lesson, but often just so he can go back for more of the same trouble.

In the market to make a killing - to double his money overnight or make a 50 per cent profit in a week or for some such foolish reason — he also desperately holds to a stock that is going the opposite way.

Said one of them: "It is surprising how one can come to live comfortably with imminent financial ruin, or, at the least, a devastating loss. You get used to living in what is really a rotting structure."

This is the statement of a young man who set out to double his money and, instead, lost an inheritance, his insurance money, his wife's savings and the cash he had set aside for a rainy day.

He listened to hot tips, bought impulsively, fired brokers and hired others whose ethics could be questioned, confused his purposes, adjusted to losses but became even greedier with gains.

Some will recognize his words as those of the Anonymous Investor who wrote the book "Wiped Out." The Anonymous Investor says he lost $60,000, even though the market was rising. The story reads like fiction. The author says it is fact.

One big mutual fund distributor has offered the book to its salesmen in bulk lots for possible distribution to potential customers, for in its own way it is an advertisement for sound management.

This amateur speculator, who didn't have rugs on his Manhattan apartment floor because he needed the money for stocks, lost his money between 1957 and 1954, then wrote a book in which he convinced himself that a lesson was learned.

He is back in the market. "Not heavily," he said in an interview. "I got an advance and I got hold of some other dough." He would, perhaps, have returned long before but "it was academic. I had no dough."

He is behind again.

The advance referred to was a cash payment for his book in advance of publication. Authorship, he feels, has permitted him to talk out his problem, his heartache, his loss.

"It's history. I've learned to live with it."

This man soon will get some more money, the income from sales of his book, which now exceeds 20,000 copies. What will he do with this money?

"I'm going to spend it on the apartment," he said, "and then what's left I'll probably go back into the market with caution, care and patience. I will invest conservatively."

The tight-money situation developing in 1966 is reflected in a downturn in new construction. Residential construction has been dropping off slightly less sharply than the overall total for all types, private and industrial.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"HOUNER"

When I was a teenager my father was a barber at Morley and our home was in the Southeast section of the village. We had a footpath through the park to town.

The park is now fenced in and the ball diamond located there.

At this time it was my duty to sweep and clean the barbershop before my father came to work. While returning home through the park a hound dog was nearby and I stopped and called to him.

He came slinking toward me and came close enough that I petted him and he licked my hand.

He was poor and thin and he stood half-hip high to the average man.

He followed me home and boy we had some dog. Where he came from, we never knew. Someone suggested the name "Houner" and it stuck.

After a few days of food and a lot of love from us boys, we decided to take him hunting. At this time there was much uncleared land and thousands of acres of virgin timber in the foothills and swamps.

On the sandy ridges, many thickets and woodslots remained. Drainage was in its infancy as the area east of the Sikeston ridge was the start of the largest drainage system of the world.

Scott county was at that time the largest grower and shipper of watermelons in the world. Little River and the Caney headwaters flowed down through what was then known as the "Nigger Wool" swamps.

Millions of feet of virgin timber was rafted and loaded to the millponds of Morehouse.

It was a decade more or less before drainage was started in these swamps.

The swamp rabbit that inhabited these swamps was equal in size to the jackrabbit and was rarely seen on the hot sandy ridges. They must require more moisture and cooler ground than the cottontail.

This brings me back to our dog "Houner". When a cottontail was jumped he was our meat as this dog was the fastest that I have ever seen.

Some of the farms were fenced with woven wire and some of the rabbits would go through these fences and try to escape, but "Houner" could sail over these fences like a "pro" steeplechaser and sometimes would almost land on the cottontail.

Naturally he became a favorite in our end of the village. He never bothered anyone or anything - was strictly a home dog.

I will now try and relate one more episode that occurred in his life.

In our town a man named Allen operated a restaurant and he was known as "Butch" Allen by all.

He had two sons that were near the age of my brother and I.

These boys had a dog named "Fritz" and he was the bully of the town.

He stayed in front of the restaurant and was always ready to attack any new dog. He wore a heavy collar of leather and brass and acted like he was the king of dogdom.

One morning as I was going to clean the barbershop I took "Houner" with me. As we walked down the street "Bully Fritz" spied my dog and made the attack and soon they were standing on their hind legs, clawing for the throat. I saw that my dog had torn "Fritz's" collar off and then he had him down with the death grip and we were forced to take my dog off to save their dog's life.

After this "Houner" was allowed to walk the sidewalk as he was the type that never started a quarrel and "Fritz" never wanted anymore of the hound. A hound, when fully aroused, is the most vicious dog on earth.

"Everytime I come to town
People keep kicking my dog around.
Makes no difference if he is a hound
They gotta quit kicking my dog around."

J. C. May

DEER HUNT

We rode out to the west of town.
It was November, the leaves were brown,
And the wind was pushing against the pines
That stood at the crest of the hill.
We saw it but made no comment.
The deer was motionless,
There by the side of the road.
We had slowed, watching him,
Wondering the way he would go.
There was the shot, he leaped high
And came to rest on the road's edge. . .
Down the bank scrambled the men,
Guns cradled in their arms,
And they gathered round,
Not too close, they feared his kick. . .
But he was dead, and soon they lifted him up
To test his size, his weight, to count his points.
We saw instead his glazed eyes,
Remembered him alive as he stood in our view,
And we drove away.

The tight-money situation developing in 1966 is reflected in a downturn in new construction. Residential construction has been dropping off slightly less sharply than the overall total for all types, private and industrial.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"HOUNER"

When I was a teenager my father was a barber at Morley and our home was in the Southeast section of the village. We had a footpath through the park to town.

The park is now fenced in and the ball diamond located there.

At this time it was my duty to sweep and clean the barbershop before my father came to work. While returning home through the park a hound dog was nearby and I stopped and called to him.

He came slinking toward me and came close enough that I petted him and he licked my hand.

He was poor and thin and he stood half-hip high to the average man.

He followed me home and boy we had some dog. Where he came from, we never knew. Someone suggested the name "Houner" and it stuck.

After a few days of food and a lot of love from us boys, we decided to take him hunting. At this time there was much uncleared land and thousands of acres of virgin timber in the foothills and swamps.

On the sandy ridges, many thickets and woodslots remained. Drainage was in its infancy as the area east of the Sikeston ridge was the start of the largest drainage system of the world.

Scott county was at that time the largest grower and shipper of watermelons in the world. Little River and the Caney headwaters flowed down through what was then known as the "Nigger Wool" swamps.

Millions of feet of virgin timber was rafted and loaded to the millponus of Morehouse.

It was a decade more or less before drainage was started in these swamps.

The swamp rabbit that inhabited these swamps was equal in size to the jackrabbit and was rarely seen on the hot sandy ridges. They must require more moisture and cooler ground than the cottontail.

This brings me back to our dog "Houner". When a cottontail was jumped he was our meat as this dog was the fastest that I have ever seen.

Some of the farms were fenced with woven wire and some of the rabbits would go through these fences and try to escape, but "Houner" could sail over these fences like a "pro" steeplechaser and sometimes would almost land on the cottontail.

Naturally he became a favorite in our end of the village. He never bothered anyone or anything - was strictly a home dog.

I will now try and relate one more episode that occurred in his life.

In our town a man named Allen operated a restaurant and he was known as "Butch" Allen by all.

He had two sons that were near the age of my brother and I.

These boys had a dog named "Fritz" and he was the bully of the town.

He stayed in front of the restaurant and was always ready to attack any new dog. He wore a heavy collar of leather and brass and acted like he was the king of dogdom.

One morning as I was going to clean the barbershop I took "Houner" with me. As we walked down the street "Bully Fritz" spied my dog and made the attack and soon they were standing on their hind legs, clawing for the throat. I saw that my dog had torn "Fritz's" collar off and then he had him down with the death grip and we were forced to take my dog off to save their dog's life.

After this "Houner" was allowed to walk the sidewalk as he was the type that never started a quarrel and "Fritz" never wanted anymore of the hound. A hound, when fully aroused, is the most vicious dog on earth.

"Everytime I come to town
People keep kicking my dog around.
Makes no difference if he is a hound
They gotta quit kicking my dog around."

J. C. May

DEER HUNT

We rode out to the west of town.
It was November, the leaves were brown,
And the wind was pushing against the pines
That stood at the crest of the hill.
We saw it but made no comment.
The deer was motionless,
There by the side of the road.
We had slowed, watching him,
Wondering the way he would go.
There was the shot, he leaped high
And came to rest on the road's edge. . .
Down the bank scrambled the men,
Guns cradled in their arms,
And they gathered round,
Not too close, they feared his kick. . .
But he was dead, and soon they lifted him up
To test his size, his weight, to count his points.
We saw instead his glazed eyes,
Remembered him alive as he stood in our view,
And we drove away.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strauss LL.B

THE CASE OF THE RELUCTANT TAXPAYER

Neville had a greater fondness for money than a monkey for a banana and found it very difficult to part with. Consequently, while the years passed by, he passed up paying his income taxes. Just before he died, however, Neville decided that since he couldn't take it with him, he'd cleanse his patriotic conscience and file a late income tax return. Unappreciative of his good intentions, after he escaped to the tax-free land above, the Internal Revenue Department assessed a sizable penalty against Neville's estate for his not having filed a timely return.

"It's absolutely ridiculous," protested the administrator of Neville's estate. "A penalty is intended to penalize. Since Neville's dead, you obviously can't penalize him. He's beyond mortal reach."

"You can't avoid paying taxes by dying," retorted a tax official. Whether a person's breathing or not, he's subject to the tax law."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit a dead man to be penalized?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided with the tax department. In doing so, he held that a penalty for filing a late income tax return may be imposed upon a taxpayer whether he is dead or alive.

(Based upon a 1956 U.S. Court of Appeals Decision)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

While a person is permitted to represent himself in his own lawsuit, he does so at a considerable risk since he will be entitled to no special privileges in doing so and will be bound by the same procedures and rules as a lawyer. (For personal guidance, see your local attorney.)

"Today, progressive taxation places limits on the earning power of the businessman, and hence upon his purely monetary motivation. More and more he draws his incentive from a sense of public responsiblity. More and more, I believe, idealistic and progressive young people will seek and find in industry not just a road to personal enrichment, but a most direct and effective means of public service."

(delivered May 29, 1955)
Robert S. McNamara.

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

We have not a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weakness, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are, yet without sinning. (Hebrews 4:15, RSV) PRAYER: Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy Son Jesus, who knows our weaknesses and our strength and loved us enough to give Himself for us, even while we were yet sinners. Forgive us and make us strong, for we come to Thee and offer our prayer in His name. Amen.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married six years. I am 21. Sam is 26. The problem is his temper. If the car won't start, Sam will break the windshield with his fist or kick a dent in the fender. The shirts had better be ironed perfectly or he will tear them to pieces. Once, when the TV broke, he hit me with the antenna and I had to have 22 stitches in my leg.

It is because of last night that I am writing this letter. I was sitting in the rocking chair reading and all of a sudden Sam yelled, "I can't stand that squeaking noise." He picked up the rocking chair with me in it and heaved it out the front door. My head hit the cement steps and I'm lucky to be alive.

My friends say Sam is a nut and I am crazier than he is for putting up with him. Can you help me? --PURPLE HEART ACHE

Dear Purple: Probably not, because I'm afraid your friends are right. If you didn't switch channels after that 5-star TV performance you must enjoy wearing bandages. So just stay with the lunatic and keep your health and accident insurance up because you're going to need it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a mother with three children under five years of age. They are all sick today because a stupid, inconsiderate relative brought over two youngsters with running noses and hacking coughs.

One of the young visitors was red as a beet and I'm sure he had a temperature. I wouldn't think of taking my children any place when they aren't well. How can some mothers be so dumb? - JUST FUMING

Dear Just: Motherhood is one accomplishment that requires no brains. It is virtually impossible to protect your children against the germs of other children. If some visiting kid doesn't cough in your children's faces, somebody in school will. Your best bet is to see that your youngsters get enough rest, are well-nourished and properly clothed.

Dear Ann Landers: What can I do to keep my mother from ruining my little sister's life as she ruined mine?

I dropped out of school at 15 because my mother was always sick and I had to stay home to take care of her. I flunked so many subjects that finally I gave up.

Now my little sister is falling into the same trap. I would give anything in the world to help her, but I don't know what to do.

Liz is a very smart girl but her grades are poor and she is so far behind now she wants to quit and start over next semester. She is only 14 and I hate to see her louse up her education the way I did.

The doctors can't find anything wrong with Mom but she insists she is sick and can't get out of bed some mornings.

I have given up trying to help Mom but I cannot give up on my little sister. What should I do? - ROPE'S END

Dear R.E.: Children should not be kept home from school to care for ill members of the family. A day or so in an emergency is O.K., but the situation you describe will surely lead to the end of your sister's education. Call your clergyman (or any clergyman) and ask to be put in touch with an agency that will give you the help you need.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents...if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50¢ in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

U. S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class John T. Bader, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus H. Bader, Route 2, Dexter, Mo., is currently participating in "Operation Thayer II" in Vietnam with his unit, the 1st Air Cavalry Division.

The operation is taking place in the central Coastal Lowlands and Central Highlands. Using air assaults and search and destroy sweeps, the division has captured caches of foodstuffs, medical supplies, weapons and ammunition.

Pvt. Bader, a radio-teletype operator in Headquarters Company of the division's 2nd Brigade, entered the Army in April 1966 and was stationed at Ft. Gordon, Ga., prior to arriving in Vietnam the following December.

Bader is a 1964 graduate of Dexter High School.

Long Welcomes Words of LBJ

WASHINGTON -- U. S. Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Missouri) today welcomed the President's call for a right of privacy act which was contained in a message on crime in America.

Senator Long said that "I am pleased the President continues to be firmly against wiretapping and eavesdropping. My Senate Subcommittee is in full agreement with the need to protect every American citizen from invasions of privacy by Federal and private agents."

The Missouri Senator said he and his Subcommitteee staff are working with the justice department in drafting specific right to privacy legislation.

After our 2nd-grader had been in school a few weeks of the first term she suddenly decided that she didn't want to eat in the school lunchroom any more.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Oh, the teacher there is always yelling at us," she replied.

"And why does she do that?" I persisted.

"Well," Helen replied, "I suppose that may be so that we won't miss our mothers so much."

Mrs. H. Priday.

In our parish, our Boy Scout group went camping. We had a wonderful time, except that when we went to bed, the mosquitoes were biting furiously.

"Hide your heads under your blankets," I advised my sons when they complained.

Four-year-old Billy peeked out and saw some fireflies.

"It's no use, dad," he told me. "Now they're looking for us with flashlights."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strauss LL.B

THE CASE OF THE RELUCTANT TAXPAYER

Neville had a greater fondness for money than a monkey for a banana and found it very difficult to part with. Consequently, while the years passed by, he passed up paying his income taxes. Just before he died, however, Neville decided that since he couldn't take it with him, he'd cleanse his patriotic conscience and file a late income tax return. Unappreciative of his good intentions, after he escaped to the tax-free land above, the Internal Revenue Department assessed a sizable penalty against Neville's estate for his not having filed a timely return.

"It's absolutely ridiculous," protested the administrator of Neville's estate. "A penalty is intended to penalize. Since Neville's dead, you obviously can't penalize him. He's beyond mortal reach."

"You can't avoid paying taxes by dying," retorted a tax official. Whether a person's breathing or not, he's subject to the tax law."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit a dead man to be penalized?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided with the tax department. In doing so, he held that a penalty for filing a late income tax return may be imposed upon a taxpayer whether he is dead or alive.

(Based upon a 1956 U.S. Court of Appeals Decision)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

While a person is permitted to represent himself in his own lawsuit, he does so at a considerable risk since he will be entitled to no special privileges in doing so and will be bound by the same procedures and rules as a lawyer. (For personal guidance, see your local attorney.)

"Today, progressive taxation places limits on the earning power of the businessman, and hence upon his purely monetary motivation. More and more he draws his incentive from a sense of public responsiblity. More and more, I believe, idealistic and progressive young people will seek and find in industry not just a road to personal enrichment, but a most direct and effective means of public service."

(delivered May 29, 1955)
Robert S. McNamara.

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

We have not a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weakness, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are, yet without sinning. (Hebrews 4:15, RSV) PRAYER: Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy Son Jesus, who knows our weaknesses and our strength and loved us enough to give Himself for us, even while we were yet sinners. Forgive us and make us strong, for we come to Thee and offer our prayer in His name. Amen.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married six years. I am 21. Sam is 26. The problem is his temper.

If the car won't start, Sam will break the windshield with his fist or kick a dent in the fender. The shirts had better be ironed perfectly or he will tear them to pieces. Once, when the TV broke, he hit me with the antenna and I had to have 22 stitches in my leg.

It is because of last night that I am writing this letter. I was sitting in the rocking chair reading and all of a sudden Sam yelled, "I can't stand that squeaking noise." He picked up the rocking chair with me in it and heaved it out the front door. My head hit the cement steps and I'm lucky to be alive.

My friends say Sam is a nut and I am crazier than he is for putting up with him. Can you help me? --PURPLE HEART ACHE

Dear Purple: Probably not, because I'm afraid your friends are right. If you didn't switch channels after that 5-star TV performance you must enjoy wearing bandages. So just stay with the lunatic and keep your health and accident insurance up because you're going to need it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a mother with three children under five years of age. They are all sick today because a stupid, inconsiderate relative brought over two youngsters with running noses and hacking coughs.

One of the young visitors was red as a beet and I'm sure he had a temperature. I wouldn't think of taking my children any place when they aren't well. How can some mothers be so dumb? - JUST FUMING

Dear Just: Motherhood is one accomplishment that requires no brains. It is virtually impossible to protect your children against the germs of other children. If some visiting kid doesn't cough in your children's faces, somebody in school will. Your best bet is to see that your youngsters get enough rest, are well-nourished and properly clothed.

Dear Ann Landers: What can I do to keep my mother from ruining my little sister's life as she ruined mine?

I dropped out of school at 15 because my mother was always sick and I had to stay home to take care of her. I flunked so many subjects that finally I gave up.

Now my little sister is falling into the same trap. I would give anything in the world to help her, but I don't know what to do.

Liz is a very smart girl but her grades are poor and she is so far behind now she wants to quit and start over next semester. She is only 14 and I hate to see her louse up her education the way I did.

The doctors can't find anything wrong with Mom but she insists she is sick and can't get out of bed some mornings.

I have given up trying to help Mom but I cannot give up on my little sister. What should I do? - ROPE'S END

Dear R.E.: Children should not be kept home from school to care for ill members of the family. A day or so in an emergency is O.K., but the situation you describe will surely lead to the end of your sister's education. Call your clergyman (or any clergyman) and ask to be put in touch with an agency that will give you the help you need.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents...if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50¢ in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Long Welcomes Words of LBJ

WASHINGTON -- U. S. Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Missouri) today welcomed the President's call for a right of privacy act which was contained in a message on crime in America.

Senator Long said that "I am pleased the President continues to be firmly against wiretapping and eavesdropping. My Senate Subcommittee is in full agreement with the need to protect every American citizen from invasions of privacy by Federal and private agents."

The Missouri Senator said he and his Subcommitteee staff are working with the justice department in drafting specific right to privacy legislation.

After our 2nd-grader had been in school a few weeks of the first term she suddenly decided that she didn't want to eat in the school lunchroom any more.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Oh, the teacher there is always yelling at us," she replied.

"And why does she do that?" I persisted.

"Well," Helen replied, "I suppose that may be so that we won't miss our mothers so much."

Mrs. H. Priday.

In our parish, our Boy Scout group went camping. We had a wonderful time, except that when we went to bed, the mosquitoes were biting furiously.

"Hide your heads under your blankets," I advised my sons when they complained.

Four - year - old Billy peeked out and saw some fireflies.

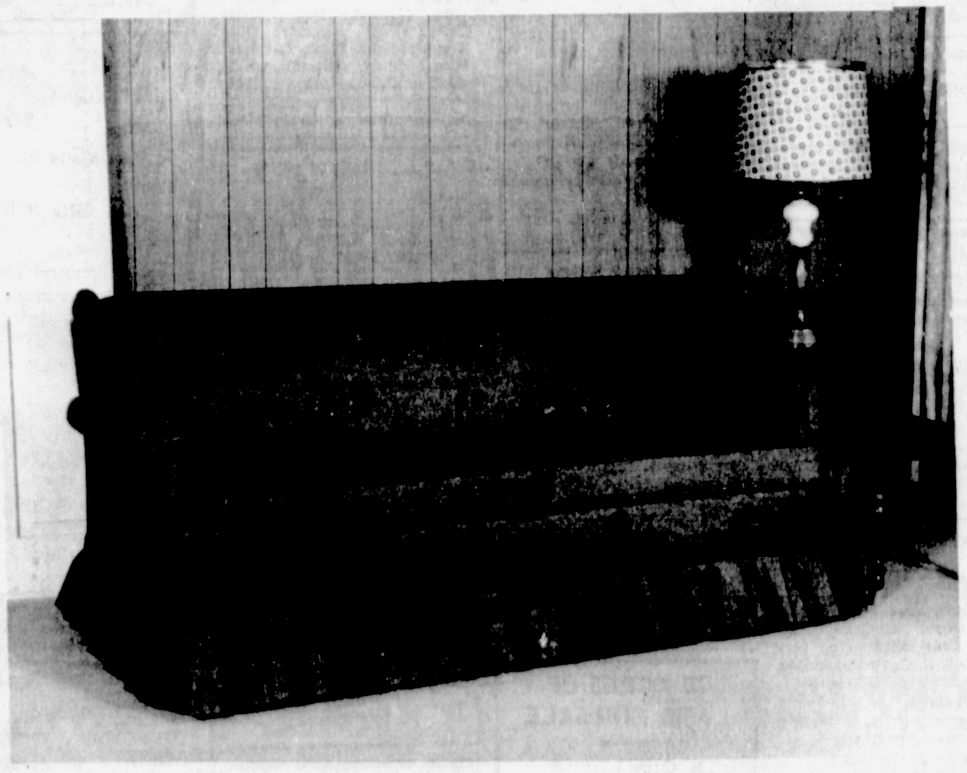

"It's no use, dad," he told me. "Now they're looking for us with flashlights."

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1861, the Congress of the Confederate States of America organized its government, electing Jefferson Davis provisional president and Alexander Stephens vice president. In 1865, on this same date, Gen. Robert E. Lee was made commander-in-chief of Confederate armed forces.

On this date:

In 1718, French colonists arrived in Louisiana.

In 1773, the ninth president of the United States, William Henry Harrison, was born.

In 1870, the U.S. Weather Bureau was established.

In 1942, the French liner Normandie burned at its pier in New York City while being prepared for wartime service.

In 1943, the battle for Guadalcanal ended.

Ten years ago — A 10-day state visit to Washington by King Saud of Saudi Arabia ended. Before adjourning their talks, King Saud and President Dwight D. Eisenhower agreed on terms for the renewal of a U.S. lease on an airfield in Saudi Arabia in exchange for American military aid.

Five years ago -- The Soviet commandant in East Berlin was barred from the U.S. sector of the city in retaliation for East German restrictions on the entry of U.S. officials into East Berlin.

One year ago--Vice President Hubert Humphrey set out with South Vietnamese leaders for Saigon. He was on a special presidential mission to spur action on programs attacking hunger, disease and ignorance in that nation.

Under the plan, the turnpike authority would consist of the state highway commission plus the governor. It would have the power to select sites, after feasibility studies, and issue revenue bonds to finance construction.

Rex M. Whitton, former chief engineer of the Missouri Highway Commission who resigned recently as head of the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads, said the toll road approach is the only feasible way to build high type safe roads in rural areas.

He foresaw no chance of any great increase in the present interstate system within the foreseeable future and said toll roads would free more money for use in crowded urban areas for expressways.

Two bills to raise University of Missouri and state college tuition and the tuition of out-of-state students failed to clear the Senate Education Committee.

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, proposed that only the top 12½ per cent of a high school graduating class be permitted to enroll at the university and the top 40 per cent at state colleges and Lincoln University.

He said too many students who could be educated at junior colleges or vocational schools are overcrowding the colleges and M. U.

Wednesday night the capitol braced itself for an expected invasion when the House Constitutional Amendments Committee held a hearing on the school bus bill.

Two weeks ago more than 1,000 people came in a rainstorm to oppose the shared time bill and its was expected that the even more controversial school bus bill would draw an even bigger crowd.

Instead, those in favor of providing bus transportation to all school students, whether in private, parochial or public schools seemed to be almost in a majority. The hearing went off without any audience interference or participation.

The familiar garb of the Catholic clergy and nuns was in evidence.

After the usual arguments about the constitutionality of the resolution, the committee adjourned without taking action.

Rep. Charles Sheehan, D-House Springs, chairman, said he expected the committee to act next week.

If approved by both houses, the issue of whether private and parochial school students can ride public school buses will be put before the people of the state at the next election in the form of a constitutional amendment.

Earlier the House refused to accept the recommendations of the Senate on an $8 million emergency appropriations bill, heading it for conference committee settlement.

er extension of the cease-fire.

Johnson told the Pope "I devoutly share your wish that the suspension of hostilities over the lunar new year may be extended and may open the way for negotiations for a just and stable peace.

"The governments of the United States and the Republic of Vietnam, together with others," the President continued, "are devoting intensive efforts to that end.

"As you know the government of Vietnam has twice signified its readiness to discuss an extension of the truce with representatives of the other side. We are prepared to talk at any time and place, in any forum, with the object of bringing peace to Vietnam."

It was at this point that Johnson said he knew Pope Paul would not expect the United States to cut back its military action unless the other side did so.

But the President added: "We are prepared to discuss the balanced reduction in military activity, the cessation of hostilities, or any practical arrangements which could lead to these results."

Administration officials continued to assert privately that the primary thrust of recent North Vietnam offers so far is to bring maximum pressure on the United States to stop bombing North Vietnam.

They argued that so far the North Vietnamese have said only that talks with the United States "could" start if the bombings were stopped unconditionally. They argued that North Vietnam deliberately has stopped short of saying that talks "would" start, which would amount to a proposal to which the United States would have to react.

At high levels in the administration officials insisted also that all peace probes through many foreign governments so far have failed to produce an opening for talks. But they did not rule out the possibility that the situation could change at any moment.

Large Freshman Class May Have GOP Influence

WASHINGTON (AP) - Freshman House Republicans, comprising nearly one-third of the party's membership, may become a significant power factor in the 90th Congress.

Like all freshmen classes, they have a club which plans to meet regularly. But unlike most, their numbers are such - 59 of 187 GOP House members - that they could make their influence felt.

"We're not trying to go out as a bloc, although on occasion that might happen," says Rep. William A. Steiger of Wisconsin, secretary of the 90th club.

Rep. William O. Cowger of Kentucky, former Louisville mayor and president of the club, said in a separate interview "I'm not interested in power."

But the Kentucky congressman said "we're probably going to be a close-knit group" and predicted the club sometimes may take positions on legislation or other House issues.

"If it's a group position, it probably could" influence the outcome, he added.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT LAUNCHES PROGRAM OF REFLECTIVE PAINTING ON BRIDGES AS SAFETY MEASURE

Missouri's narrow bridges are being outlined with reflective paint under a new safety program, the State Highway Department announced today.

M. J. Snider, chief engineer, said that about 3200 bridges in the state would be painted. The reflective paint is applied to the end posts and on the edges of railing posts along the bridges. About 150 bridges have been painted so far in the program.

Department maintenance forces are doing the work. The paint, applied by brush or roller, costs about $4 a pound. At 12 pounds per gallon, that's about $48 a gallon. Snider said that $90,000 had been budgeted for the program during the calendar year and that he hoped that would cover the entire program.

"We believe that this relatively small cost will bring big dividends in safety for drivers on Missouri's highways," said Snyder. "The painted areas are visible at night as soon as a car's headlights shine on them. Thus the driver can see clearly the outline of the bridge."

Under the program, the paint will be applied to all bridges which are not two feet wider than the approaching roadway. Bridges on heavily traveled routes will be painted first.

The paint cannot be applied when the temperature drops below 50 degrees so the entire program may not be completed until this spring or early summer. The paint is expected to last from five to seven years.

Two bills to raise University of Missouri and state college tuition and the tuition of out-of-state students failed to clear the Senate Education Committee.

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, proposed that only the top 12½ per cent of a high school graduating class be permitted to enroll at the university and the top 40 per cent at state colleges and Lincoln University.

He said too many students who could be educated at junior colleges or vocational schools are overcrowding the colleges and M. U.

Wednesday night the capitol braced itself for an expected invasion when the House Constitutional Amendments Committee held a hearing on the school bus bill.

Two weeks ago more than 1,000 people came in a rainstorm to oppose the shared time bill and its was expected that the even more controversial school bus bill would draw an even bigger crowd.

Instead, those in favor of providing bus transportation to all school students, whether in private, parochial or public schools seemed to be almost in a majority. The hearing went off without any audience interference or participation.

The familiar garb of the Catholic clergy and nuns was in evidence.

After the usual arguments about the constitutionality of the resolution, the committee adjourned without taking action.

Rep. Charles Sheehan, D-House Springs, chairman, said he expected the committee to act next week.

If approved by both houses, the issue of whether private and parochial school students can ride public school buses will be put before the people of the state at the next election in the form of a constitutional amendment.

Earlier the House refused to accept the recommendations of the Senate on an $8 million emergency appropriations bill, heading it for conference committee settlement.

er extension of the cease-fire.

Johnson told the Pope "I devoutly share your wish that the suspension of hostilities over the lunar new year may be extended and may open the way for negotiations for a just and stable peace.

"The governments of the United States and the Republic of Vietnam, together with others," the President continued, "are devoting intensive efforts to that end.

"As you know the government of Vietnam has twice signified its readiness to discuss an extension of the truce with representatives of the other side. We are prepared to talk at any time and place, in any forum, with the object of bringing peace to Vietnam."

It was at this point that Johnson said he knew Pope Paul would not expect the United States to cut back its military action unless the other side did so.

But the President added: "We are prepared to discuss the balanced reduction in military activity, the cessation of hostilities, or any practical arrangements which could lead to these results."

Administration officials continued to assert privately that the primary thrust of recent North Vietnam offers so far is to bring maximum pressure on the United States to stop bombing North Vietnam.

They argued that so far the North Vietnamese have said only that talks with the United States "could" start if the bombings were stopped unconditionally. They argued that North Vietnam deliberately has stopped short of saying that talks "would" start, which would amount to a proposal to which the United States would have to react.

At high levels in the administration officials insisted also that all peace probes through many foreign governments so far have failed to produce an opening for talks. But they did not rule out the possibility that the situation could change at any moment.

Large Freshman Class May Have GOP Influence

WASHINGTON (AP) - Freshman House Republicans, comprising nearly one-third of the party's membership, may become a significant power factor in the 90th Congress.

Like all freshmen classes, they have a club which plans to meet regularly. But unlike most, their numbers are such - 59 of 187 GOP House members - that they could make their influence felt.

"We're not trying to go out as a bloc, although on occasion that might happen," says Rep. William A. Steiger of Wisconsin, secretary of the 90th club.

Rep. William O. Cowger of Kentucky, former Louisville mayor and president of the club, said in a separate interview "I'm not interested in power."

But the Kentucky congressman said "we're probably going to be a close-knit group" and predicted the club sometimes may take positions on legislation or other House issues.

"If it's a group position, it probably could" influence the outcome, he added.

A former choir singer was asked why he gave up singing with his church group.

"I was absent on Sunday," he explained, "and somebody asked if the organ had been fixed."

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT LAUNCHES PROGRAM OF REFLECTIVE PAINTING ON BRIDGES AS SAFETY MEASURE

Missouri's narrow bridges are being outlined with reflective paint under a new safety program, the State Highway Department announced today.

M. J. Snider, chief engineer, said that about 3200 bridges in the state would be painted. The reflective paint is applied to the end posts and on the edges of railing posts along the bridges. About 150 bridges have been painted so far in the program.

Department maintenance forces are doing the work. The paint, applied by brush or roller, costs about $4 a pound. At 12 pounds per gallon, that's about $48 a gallon. Snider said that $90,000 had been budgeted for the program during the calendar year and that he hoped that would cover the entire program.

"We believe that this relatively small cost will bring big dividends in safety for drivers on Missouri's highways," said Snyder. "The painted areas are visible at night as soon as a car's headlights shine on them. Thus the driver can see clearly the outline of the bridge."

Under the program, the paint will be applied to all bridges which are not two feet wider than the approaching roadway. Bridges on heavily traveled routes will be painted first.

The paint cannot be applied when the temperature drops below 50 degrees so the entire program may not be completed until this spring or early summer. The paint is expected to last from five to seven years.

Seat belts are nothing new. As youngsters, most of us were belted across the seat at times.

Richard M. Nixon, speaking in San Francisco, offered this comparison of himself and President Johnson: "Lyndon Johnson served as Vice President -- I served in the House, the Senate and as Vice President. Lyndon Johnson has a dog -- I have a dog. Lyndon has two daughters -- I have two daughters. Lyndon Johnsons has a lovely wife -- I have a lovely wife. Lyndon Johnson has a television station -- I have a lovely wife."

When the first transcontinental telephone line was opened between New York and San Francisco in 1915, the minimum rate for a three-minute, station-to-station call was $20.70. Today, you can make the same call for $1.

Matter of fact, you can call anywhere in the continental United States (except Alaska) for $1 or less after 8 p.m. daily or anytime on Sunday. And service is faster and more convenient than ever before.

Providing you with better service at a bargain cost is our idea of a good way to do business.
